Was big flash a neutron bomb test?

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — There is a nagging suspicion among scientists studying the mysterious nuclear explosion last Sept. 22 near South Africa that it was a neutron bomb.

"We have no evidence that it was a neutron bomb but the possibility has been discussed more than once," said one source close to the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. "It's one of the few things that could explain why we've never found any radioactive fallout from the explosion."

Designed for use on the battlefield, a neutron bomb generates a small fireball that produces little physical destruction but a huge excess of neutrons. The neutrons are lethal to people in the vicinity but do not travel far and do not persist in the atmosphere the way radioactive fallout does.

A neutron bomb would also explain the low strength of the explosion seen last Sept. 22 by an orbiting Vela satellite, whose optical sensors (called "bangmeters") witnessed what scientists say was an explosion with a force between two and four kilotons.

"An explosion of a neutron weapon would certainly explain the low yield of that event," one nuclear weapons scientist from the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory said. "It takes a complicated design process to build a neutron bomb but I wouldn't be shocked at the idea that somebody was smart enough to test one."

The Central Intelligence Agency has told Congress that if the event seen in the South African skies Sept. 22 was a nuclear explosion, then it suspects Israel or South Africa or both as the source of the event.

Weapons analysts say they can understand why both Israel and South Africa would be interested in developing a neutron bomb, which could be an effective last-ditch battlefield defence for both countries in all-out war with their neighbors.

So far as anybody knows, no country has ever tested a neutron bomb. There was some speculation that France may have tested one two years ago at its South Pacific underground test site but it has never been confirmed.

Still another suspicion that nags scientists about the mystery explosion is the possibility that it was not the first in the skies near South Africa. There is a distinct possibility that other nuclear explosions took place below the Cape of Good Hope before Sept. 22.

Sources point out that the Vela that picked up the fireball was literally out of position the night of the event. Put into orbit 10 years ago, the Vela had lost altitude with time and was circling Earth in a way that brought it over the same spots on Earth at unpredictable times.

"We were lucky the Vela picked up the fireball because if it had not been out of position it would have missed it," one source said. "There is a chance the same Vela missed other explosions before Sept. 22, when it was in the position it was supposed to be in."

One source said that whoever set off the explosion in the middle of the night on Sept. 22, could have timed it so that Vela would miss it. The source said the panel of scientists convened by the White House to unravel the mystery even looked into the possibility that somebody tried to fool the Vela satellite into mistaking the explosion for some other phenomenon.

"There were many light flashes Vela saw that had some of the characteristics of nuclear explosions," the source said. "The panel considered the possibility that some were deliberate flashes of laser beams to confuse the satellite but the possibility was set aside. There wasn't enough similarity between the Sept. 22 flash and the hundreds of other flashes it saw."

So much of the puzzling explosion remains a mystery that next month the White House will reconvene the panel of outside scientists it brought together last November to investigate it. The White House thought the panel had finished its work in January and even drafted a report that was said to summarize the panel's findings. The report has never been made public.

Trident back in air again by Monday?

ROLLING OUT a barrel of names is CFAX's Shelley Cooper who is really only showing less than half of one of two rolls of petition forms filled in the station's Save-the-Maggie campaign. The station cut off counting at 10 this morning with about 32,000 names of persons calling on the government to leave the Princess Marguerite on the Victoria-Seattle route this summer. The petition is to be presented to Premier Bill Bennett on Wednesday afternoon.

The Trident aircraft plant in North Saanich — forced to close two months ago when the former Conservative government cut off funding — could be back in operation as early as next Monday.

Federal minister of industry, trade and commerce Herb Gray said in an interview from Ottawa today he expects to present a proposal on resumption of funding to the Treasury Board on Thursday.

"I am very much aware of the seriousness of the situation," Gray said. "It is our intention to move to carry out the commitment of restoring the help the previous Liberal government had offered to Trident."

The former Liberal government had pledged to give the company loans and grants totalling $4 million but the Conservative government cut off funds after $2 million had been spent.

If Treasury Board agrees, the company could be back in business on Monday, Trident's chief executive officer Jerry Vaverek said.

However, Vaverek was cautious about Gray's announcement.

"It'll be nice if it happens and when it happens but this problem has been going on since last summer. There have been a lot of good intentions and a lot of meetings. I'll believe it Friday morning."

Newell Morrison, president of the B.C. Development Corporation, said: "It's terrific. I feel quite optimistic."

BCDC has promised to provide the company $4 million in loans if the federal government lives up to its original agreement.

Market Square for sale

Market Square in downtown Victoria has been put up for sale for $5.5 million by owner Abacus Cities Ltd. of Alberta.

The company was forced into receivership last year.

The project has more than 50 tenants, ranging from restaurants to two bookstores and offices on the third floor, and occupies more than half of the square block bounded by Johnson, Wharf, Pandora and Government streets.

Fort Victoria Properties Ltd., Sam Bawlf's development company, first transformed the ramshackle hotels and warehouses into an attractive shopping centre with interior courtyard. When he became an MLA in 1975, Bawlf sold his firm to Abacus.

Driver dies on Malahat

He was Martin John Philip of 22 West Burnside.

Colwood police said Philip's car was spotted in the bush by a passer-by at 2:30 p.m. Using a tracking dog, police found the body 30 metres from the wreckage.

Police believe the accident occurred early Sunday morning.

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market continued to crumble today, sliding below the 2000 level for the first time since Jan. 14 in active mid-afternoon trading. The TSE 300 index skidded down 66.49 points to 1979.22.

Please don't throw us out, Glenshiel oldsters plead

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

The condemned Glenshiel Hotel was festooned with protest banners early this morning by hotel staff and relatives of the 60 elderly residents facing eviction by the provincial government.

Large banners and signs with slogans like "Don't Break Up Our Home" hung from windows and from the roof of the 75-year-old hotel at 606 Douglas.

Residents are angry about an announcement by Housing Minister James Chabot last month that the government-owned building will close in two years and residents placed in other institutions.

Glenshiel manager Bert Hanson said the staff is solidly behind the protest and raised $250 to match an equal amount the senior citizens collected among themselves to pay for sign material and for a petition to save the guest home.

The elderly residents and their families and friends worked all weekend making the signs.

They want the people of Victoria to help them in their fight to keep the hotel operating.

Average age of the residents is 80, and some are in their 90s.

Six-year resident Olive Stuart, 80, could barely be heard above the noise of a large sign slapping in the breeze outside her room window as she told the Times residents won't leave without a fight.

"The last thing in the world they want to do is get out of this place," she said.

Some of them are still in shock from the announcement the building is too expensive to repair.

The news came two weeks ago from government officials who arrived at the building during lunch, she said.

Chabot said the building is at the stage where it would require massive amounts of money to bring it up to standard for long-term use.

The government will spend about $180,000 on minor repairs to make the hotel comfortable while alternative accommodation is being found for residents. The process could take up to two years.

Mrs. Stuart worked two days at a sewing machine stitching protest banners.

"We came here of our own free will and we pay our own way. We've been allowed to bring our own furniture and we feel at home," she said.

Residents pay $15 a day for room and board and maid service.

The hotel atmosphere makes guests feel independent and the building is conveniently located downtown.

"It's nothing to take a taxi down to Eatons, but if we got put someplace way out like Oak Bay Manor, why, we couldn't afford to

Welcome to the 'we' decade

TORONTO (CP) — In the eyes of Toronto's advertising industry, the "me generation" of the 1970s has been supplanted in the 1980s by the "we generation."

The advertisers say the new trends — and therefore the new marketing weapons — this decade will be togetherness [illegible]

"In a sense," says one Toronto advertising executive, "what we're doing is wrapping up your emotions and selling them back to you and making you think it's a bargain."

Another puts it more bluntly. "We went about as far as we could with the self-centred me-decade advertising in the 1970s. Now we're moving into the we decade."

What exactly is this new phenomenon?

Advertising men say it is appeal through universal and immediately identifiable emotional symbols such as babies, puppies, and grandmothers surrounded by warmly approving friends and neighbors.

It is the exact [illegible] 1970s advertising stressing independence, assertiveness and self-indulgence, they say.

"The '80s will be an era of emotions, sharing, relationships and above all, the family," says Norman Sylvester, vice-president of advertising of Pepsico in Purchase, N.Y.

To convey this new attitude, Canadian advertisers are planning new types of commercials to tap these altruistic feelings.

"Back to family feeling is the message this advertising season," says Jerry Goodis, a Toronto advertising executive.

"You can expect a whole series of ads showing caring people depending on each other," he says.

Some people in the advertising business believe these attitudes were always present in society, only to be pushed in the background the past 25 years.

"For more than 100 years, North Americans stressed values like sharing, family and self-denial," says Arthur Shapiro, senior vice-president of a New York market firm. "It's only in the last 25 years they have focused on the self."

Tourists needn't worry about a gas shortage

A feared gasoline shortage in British Columbia this summer is unlikely to occur, spokesmen for the oil industry said today.

In the short term, for the rest of 1980, the industry foresees no problems, said Jim Lefrancois, retail sales manager in Vancouver for Shell Oil's western Canada operations.

"We don't foresee anyone in the industry running out of gasoline," he said.

"Right now it's a pretty comfortable position. It's tight but it's tenable."

Weekend press and television reports speculated there wouldn't be enough gasoline to go around, especially if an expected deluge of U.S. tourists arrives on our doorstep this year, attracted by cheap gas.

John Plul, executive-director of Tourism B.C., says his department is aware of a possible gasoline shortage, so tourist promotion this year will stress group travel by bus, plane and train.

He's predicting a 10 per cent increase in visits by Americans this year. About 3.7 million Americans visited B.C. last year.

"If they get the message to come here, we're not going to turn cars away from the border," Plul said.

Dr. Harry Swain, assistant deputy energy minister, said: "I think we're all right. I think we'll squeak through even with the increase in tourists, but if there are any serious refinery problems such as mechanical breakdowns we'll really be stretched."

Lefrancois said the same thing, but noted that refinery or pipeline breakdown is always a factor, and so far B.C. has not gone short of gasoline.

The worst situation was during last summer's strike by refinery workers, he added, but everyone who needed gas could get it.

Swain said he would talk to government travel officials in Washington state about reports that potential visitors to B.C. are being told gasoline is cheap and plentiful in the province.

In the U.S., motorists are faced with a near-record gasoline surplus, but Americans are driving less and it raises the question whether many will be willing to drive more than a few hundred miles up to Canada.

In Washington state gas is about 32 cents a litre, compared with 22.7 here.

Oil analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday U.S. gasoline consumption was down 11 per cent in the last three months, compared with the same period in 1979.

"Unless people now start buying more gasoline than they have been at current prices, there could be a surplus of publicly available gasoline in March in the nation as a whole," he said.

"It's a 180-degree turnaround that few oil company executives foresaw."

It's the other way around in Canada.

"People just aren't slowing down," said Lefrancois.

Gasoline sales in Canada were up 2.3 per cent last year, 3.5 per cent in B.C. This province's total consumption is expected to increase 4.1 per cent this year.

Here's handy-dandy guide to the office troublemakers

NEW YORK (AP) — In every office about 10 per cent of the employees are "relentlessly difficult" to work with, a California management consultant says in Time Magazine.

The newsmagazine said that Robert Bramson, after studying 400 office managers and other workers, found that office staffers fall into three categories: 10 per cent are the office troublemakers, 70 per cent are unable to cope with the troublemakers and 20 per cent are not bothered by them.

Bramson, 54, said his office-harmony program is based on a simple premise: difficult people learn their bad behavior "precisely because it has worked for them (and) elicits predictable, typical reaction from other people."

He described five types of troublemakers and said each should be dealt with differently.

— The hostile-aggressives include the "Sherman tanks," "snipers" and "exploders."

The way to cope with the loud, pushy Sherman is to look him "straight in the eye, call him by name and state your disagreement using phrases like 'in my opinion,' " Bramson said.

Snipers use sarcasm or irony and "should be asked to explain and expand their remarks," he said.

Exploders should be allowed to vent their anger, but if that doesn't clear the air, he advised bosses to "leave the room, saying you will return in five minutes."

— The second group of troublemakers are the complainers, who "lace their speech with 'always' and 'never.' " He advises bosses merely to respond with "ums" and "ahs."

— Third, he said, are the indecisive troublemakers, who come in two varieties: "analysts" afraid of making a mistake and needing lots of support, and "be nicers," afraid of making enemies, who should not be shown any enthusiasm.

— The fourth variety are the unresponsive troublemakers, "too frightened, confused or hostile to discuss matters." Bramson suggests trying to "outwait" them by staring at them in a "friendly fashion" without saying a word. He said chances are that the unresponsive troublemaker will break first.

— Bramson dubbed the fifth group the know-it-alls, who come in two types. There are the "real experts who are right about 75 per cent of the time, and the phoney experts who are inept and usually wrong."

All week to probe Vogel

Attorney-General Allan Williams said today his review of allegations against deputy Richard Vogel could take all week and he will have no comment until it is completed.

Vogel went on indefinite leave of absence Friday after a Thursday night CBC report alleged he had interfered in three court cases on behalf of friends.

The NDP opposition, meanwhile, suggested a fourth case of possible interference — the decision not to lay influence-peddling charges against Socred MLA Bill Ritchie despite RCMP and crown counsel recommendations that charges be laid.

Immigrants eyed to fill 600,000 West jobs

WINNIPEG (CP) — The federal government may increase immigration to help fill more than 600,000 new jobs in western Canada in the 1980s, the federal minister of employment and immigration said Saturday.

As well, Lloyd Axworthy said, the government plans to step up job training for natives and women.

Axworthy, who is also minister responsible for the status of women, told a press conference here he expects 300,000 new jobs will be created in the West in the next six years, and more than 600,000 by 1990.

He said the West already faces a shortage of skilled labor. From 1971-1978, he said, employment opportunities in the West increased 33 per cent, while the labor force grew by 30.4 per cent.

Axworthy said the government is considering increased immigration as part of a thorough examination of its refugee immigration program.

He said the Liberal government wants to assure that the benefits of an economic boom in one or two provinces are shared by the others. Specifically, he said, Manitoba's manufacturing and other industries should benefit from Alberta's resources.

Khomeini limits meeting, transfer of hostages off

TEHRAN (CP) — Ayatollah Khomeini said today a United Nations' commission can question U.S. embassy hostages involved in "crimes" against Iran, but the commission cannot see all the captives unless it issues its report in Tehran, the state radio said.

"We shall fight against the U.S. government to the end of our life," Khomeini said.

Meanwhile, Reuters news agency quoted a militant spokesman as saying there will be no transfer of the hostages from the control of the militants following the statement by Khomeini.

"The reason we wanted to transfer the hostages to the Revolutionary Council was because of pressures being placed on us," the spokesman said. "That pressure has now been removed. We will keep the hostages."

Khomeini's statement appeared to repudiate the decision by the Revolutionary Council ordering militants holding the 50 hostages for 128 days to allow the commission to meet all the hostages or hand them over to government custody.

Khomeini's statement to the nation also ordered the embassy militants "to deliver copies of all documents concerning the U.S. intervention and the traitor shah" to the UN commission.

The commission was meeting with President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr as Khomeini's statement was made public.

The commission of lawyers already has made it clear it considered a meeting with all of the Americans a necessary part of its mandate which includes hearing Iranian grievances against the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and working to resolve the U.S.-Iran crisis.

There was no immediate response from government spokesmen to the announcement which appears to undercut Bani-Sadr in his efforts to find a resolution to the hostage crisis which began when the U.S. Embassy was seized Nov. 4.

In Washington, reporters were told President Carter is willing to consider publicly expressing concern about past events in Iran in an effort to end the hostage crisis there.

The U.S. president, described as apparently dejected by what the administration sees as continuing confusion in Tehran, hopes the American hostages can be freed by May. But he is unwilling to state whether this can be achieved.

His thoughts about a so-called expression of concern were not given in detail, although he feels there are obvious things that can be said about the situation that has developed over the years in Iran.

Carter's views were made known during a meeting Saturday morning in the White House family dining room, under ground rules that prohibited identification of the source and direct quotation.

And in Monroe, La., 47 jailed Iranians, on the fourth day of a hunger strike, say they were arrested in retaliation for the seizure of the about 50 U.S. hostages in Iran and will not co-operate at their arraignment today, their lawyer says.

"Apparently the officers were trying to get the magic number of 50," lawyer Marion Overton White said Sunday. "The arrest is political and racial.

"They were singled out as Iranians and arrested.

There will be an increase in B.C. Hydro's electric rates effective April 1

B.C. Hydro electric rates are being increased effective April 1 to cover projected increases in the cost of providing service during the 1980-81 fiscal year.

While the increases average 7 per cent for residential and general customers the rate changes will have greater effect on those customers whose consumption of electricity is relatively high.

Residential customers who use 550 kilowatt-hours of electricity or less per two-month billing period will pay 25 cents more per month, or $3.00 a year.

RESIDENTIAL ELECTRIC RATE (Two-Month Period)

	OLD RATE	NEW RATE
BASIC CHARGE	$4.50	$5.00
1ST 550 kW.h PER kW.h	4.5¢	4.5¢
ALL ADDITIONAL CONSUMPTION PER kW.h	2.65¢	3.0¢
MINIMUM CHARGE	$4.50	$5.00

The above rate is for residential customers connected to Hydro's integrated transmission network.

Here are some examples of how new rates will affect typical electric bills:

- Apartment suite without either electric space heating or water heating—two month consumption of 500 kilowatt-hours: 25¢ a month increase.
- House with electric water heating but without electric space heating—two month consumption of 2,000 kW.h: $2.79 a month increase.
- House with both electric space heating and water heating—two month consumption of 5,000 kW.h: $8.04 a month increase.

Large industrial customers served on Hydro's electric transmission rate will receive rate increases of 22% on April 1, 1980, as announced in 1978.

Gas guzzlers get ICBC break

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new Insurance Corp. of B.C. premium schedule gives a break to motorists whose cars are gas guzzlers and a kick in the pocket book to those who drive small cars to save gasoline.

It was previously thought the main impact of the new schedule, aimed at eliminating sex and age discrimination from car insurance, would be to slash rates for young drivers, particularly single men.

The changes, which involve all car owners, was not spotted until insurance agents got into the thick of renewals for the new insurance year. They found that in many cases, older drivers who own big cars also were getting a reduction this year, while the owners of smaller cars were being charged more.

An analysis of changes between 1979 and 1980 rates for private cars in the Vancouver area shows:

— It is the rates for collision and comprehensive coverage — which looks after damage done to your own vehicle in an accident that you are held to be wholly or partly to blame — that give the break to the bigger, more expensive and usually more gas-consuming cars while hitting the smaller, cheaper and better-mileage cars.

— This is compounded by changes in vehicle rate groups in which some small cars now are in a higher category and some big cars have had their rating reduced.

— Basic coverage premiums, now giving $100,000 third-party liability, are up 12 per cent for all car owners except single men under 30 and in those cases where there was an occasional driver under 25.

— Premiums for extending third-party coverage to amounts from $200,000 to $1 million are down for all drivers.

The over-all result is that the total cost of insurance is down for many drivers with big cars but up for those with smaller vehicles.

The Crown corporation denies it has intentionally rewarded owners of gas-guzzlers while penalizing those whose cars sip fuel.

A car's gasoline consumption is not a factor in setting rates, says Tommy Holmes, senior vice-president in charge of Autoplan.

Rates are not set on the basis of what it costs the corporation to repair a damaged small car as opposed to a damaged large car, he says, nor on the costs of fixing an import compared with a domestic, but on the estimated value of the car.

The car rating table used by the corporation did not allow it to make adjustments for new cars, nor for devaluation as cars got older, leading to anomalies over the years.

"We had to take the bull by the horns and get the vehicle classifications right," Holmes said, "so we sat down and re-did the entire rating group structure."

The corporation found it was charging too much for bigger cars and not enough for older, lower-value cars so it "shuffled the deck" and came up with a proper table.

The end result is that 43 per cent of all private cars were rated down, seven per cent went up and 50 per cent stayed the same.

McKitka may keep seat

SURREY (CP) — Alderman Ed McKitka should be able to keep his council seat despite his conviction Friday on seven criminal counts, Mayor Don Ross said Sunday.

While the Municipal Act says any person convicted of a criminal offence can not sit on council for five years after their sentence has been served, the appeal process should allow McKitka to prevent a byelection being called for his seat, Ross said

He said he expected council to pass a resolution tonight disqualifyiing McKitka, who then would have five days to have the resolution set aside pending an appeal.

The appeal process probably will last until McKitka's term expires in November, Ross said.

McKitka, mayor of Surrey from 1975 to 1977, was convicted Friday in B.C Supreme Court of seven charges relating to his disclosure of confidential zoning information to developers. He was found guilty of four counts of breach of trust, two counts of demanding a benefit and one count of threatening a Surrey alderman.

McKitka will be sentenced Friday and faces a maximum penalty of five years in jail.

Kaiser closes off share-buying deal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kaiser Resources Ltd. announced Sunday it has completed the purchase of nine million of its outstanding common shares at $44 a share.

A total of 18,732,212 shares were tendered under the offer which closed Friday. Of that amount, 8,711,368 shares were owned by Kaiser Steel Corp. of Oakland, Calif., and 10,020,844 shares were owned by other shareholders.

Kaiser said in a news release that because the total shares tendered exceeded the number of shares to be purchased under the offer, the company bought 48 per cent of the shares tendered by each shareholder

Last Tuesday, B.C. Resources Investment Corp. announced plans to buy the remainder of Kaiser Steel's holdings in Kaiser Resources after the share purchase by Kaiser Resources was completed.

BCRIC said it would pay $44 each for the Kaiser shares, which would give it a 25-per-cent holding in the company.

However, corporation president David Helliwell said on Friday he might not proceed with plans to buy into Kaiser.

Emergency lights ready at Cassidy

The federal transport ministry has approved the use of Nanaimo's Cassidy Airport landing lights by private aircraft.

Pilots can turn on the lights from as far away as 20 miles by radio on a special frequency. The light system was installed some time ago but only approved by the ministry last week.

Once triggered, the runway lights stay on for 20 minutes.

Officials will not approve the field for night commercial flights until hazard beacons are installed and tall trees on the approach path are trimmed.

Nanaimo enumeration

NANAIMO Nanaimo will undertake its first complete voter enumeration since the city amalgamated with surrounding improvement districts five years ago.

Deuputy city clerk Sandy Gray said the enumeration is not as important as it used to be as voters can now register on election day, but an up-to-date list speeds the process.

House-to-house registration will run for three or four weeks in May, with the enumeration to be completed by the end of June.

Promises worth keeping

If the prime-minister elect of Rhodesia, soon to become Zimbabwe, can make good his post election promises and aspirations, he will contribute much to the stability of the country and the African continent.

After winning 57 seats in the new 100-seat parliament Robert Mugabe, leader of the Zimbabwe African National Union, tried hard to reassure the country's minorities that peace would prevail and to reassure the world that Zimbabwe statehood would not mean alignment with either of the world's superpowers. He asked all races to join hands in a new unity and said it was time "to beat our swords into ploughshares." He pleaded with his supporters to be patient and recognize that change will not come overnight.

Because Mugabe and his party are Marxist, which is synonomous with Communist in many people's minds, there was concern his victory would automatically mean alignment with the Soviet bloc. However, the new prime minister has repeatedly said Zimbabwe will be non-aligned. "It will seek friendship with all countries that agree with our objectives of freedom and independence. We have to develop ties with socialist countries, but also ties with non-socialist countries which are prepared to be in friendship and harmony with use."

Mugabe will lead his country to black majority rule and independence with the prospects of a peaceful transition. A majority of seats in parliament will eliminate the uncertainty and probable conflicts that would have been associated with forming a coalition government.

The new government seems over its first hurdle. The white minority, on which Zimbabwe's economic infra-structure depends, appears willing to give the new government a chance. Although disappointed with the election outcome, they cannot complain the election wasn't as fair as reasonably possible, and so far there has been no mass exodus.

A peaceful, non-aligned Zimbabwe would add incentive to its neighbors, particularly Zambia and Tanzania, to reaffirm their non-alignment. Those countries came into increasing contact with Cuban forces in Africa which aided the expansion of the guerilla war against Ian Smith's white-ruled Rhodesia. And, if peace and racial harmony do prove a reality in Zimbabwe, it could become a model to haunt the white supremacy of South Africa.

In slow motion

Many questions remain to be answered about why B.C. Hydro's rates are going up at all next month, but at least its rate policy for residential users is moving in the right direction, even if slowly.

The latest increase scheduled for April 1 averages seven per cent with the highest increases landing on the laps of those who use more electricity. But the small users, particularly those in thousands of apartments throughout B.C., still contribute more than their fair share.

Residential consumers buy electricity in kilowatt hours. For the first 550 kW.hours you pay 4.5 cents per kW. hour. Under the new rate hikes, the charge remains unchanged. However, the charge per kW. hour for anything above 550 kW hours will move from 2.65 cents to 3.0 cents. Everyone, whether a big or small user, pays an additional $5 every two months for what the company calls fixed costs.

When announcing the rate increases, Hydro worked out that the average apartment dweller uses 500 kW hours every two months, a homeowner with an electric hot water tank uses 2,000 kW hours and a homeowner with electric heat and hot water uses 5,000 kW hours. Under the new rates, every two months those people would pay $27.50, $73.25 and $163.25 respectively. The figures included the $5 bi-monthly basic charge.

A little arithmetic shows that the average cost for each kW. hour used, including the $5 bimonthly fee, works out to 5.5 cents for the apartment dweller, 3.7 cents for the first homeowner and 3.3 cents for the third homeowner.

Although Hydro did not raise the rates on electrical consumers who use less than 550 kW hours every two months, the apartment dweller is still paying 60 per cent more per kW. hour than the homeowner with electric heat and hot water.

Hydro says the new rates reflect a gradual alteration of charges to residential users to encourage conservation. Although the rates have been juggled so that large users pay the largest increase, the small users are still being hit hard.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Failing the test of failure

To the old countryman March is always the month of horror mixed with hope, horror of the spring labor ahead, hope for the crop. Not that the crop amounted to much but it posed a test of his endurance, his right to a share of the world's meager food supply. This year, for the first time, he decided to fail the test. Having planted and reaped 55 annual crops on the same ground, he would call it quits.

Yesterday, in the rural post box, he found a seed catalogue, that irresistible tantalizer with its gaudy portraits of vegetables never known on earth, only in some gardeners' nirvane — tomatoes blushing like Victorian virgins, beets as fat, sleek and carnal as Rubens' nudes, corn golden and luscious, nourishment for angels, peas more tasty than the gods' ambrosia.

Annual temptation

Yet all delusory, the catalogue of dreams, the immemorial temptation of March, the vernal siron song. Well, he would resist it and plant no more.

So he thrust the catalogue aside and went outdoors to survey the remains of his last crop, his final contribution to mankind's diet.

Though only about the size of two city lots, the garden seemed to stretch to the far horizon, expanding year by year, as his tools mysteriously increased in weight and turned unweildy in his hands. Somehow the laws of geometry and physics didn't work any longer.

The garden's remains were pitiable. A row of sturdy leeks had survived the mild Pacific coast winter, some indestructible parsnips bore fresh green sprouts but were said to be poisonous at this season, and a few Brussells sprouts clung to withered stalks like abandoned baby cabbages. A grim spectacle, an intimation of mortality.

Surveying the ruins, his eye caught those crimson spots on the black earth that surely proclaimed the spring, the first brave thrusts of rhubarb, each a ruby in a settling of tiny leaves as crinkled, veined and delicately patterned as the finest [illegible] beautiful and, in due time, [illegible]ble, too.

Man could not feel it yet but the northern hemisphere was warming up again, its intricate mechanism of growth already in full production.

Roots were spreading underground. Worms digested and processed the hard soil, turning it into soft, tillable loam as man's essential servants. Microscopic bacteria completed the process, faithful to their silent work ethic. Even a family of honey bees had ventured out prematurely from the neighboring farmer's hives to explore the vagrant crocus and snowdrop bloom among the oak trees.

These were friends but man did not lack enemies. In the fruit trees the invisible eggs of months would be hatching by now. Their slimy green caterpillars of voracious appetite must soon emerge and consume the buds, destroying any chance of autumn plus, apples and pears, unless the feeble orchardist masked his face against toxic spray, climbed a high ladder with his clumsy pump and risked life and limb.

No matter, he would not climb and spray again. As he so resolved, the world's best neighbor from the farm down the lane arrived with his unfailing spring gift, a big truckload of barnyard stuff — ripe, organic, wholesome, beyond price, its steaming emanatin sweeter to the experienced nostril than all the perfumes of Arabia.

The recipient of this treasure could not bear to tell the giver that it was wasted, that the garden and orchard would be surrendered to weeds, brush and nature's inevitable reconquest.

After a brief discussion of national politics, the young farmer drove away and the old man felt the humiliation of his deception and surrender. Age could not communicate with youth in matters of real importance, only in such trivia as government.

Returning homeward at dusk, he stopped to examine a tiny speck of color in the grass. He knelt down and there, sure enough, was the first purple violet, its scent perhaps rivaling the barnyard. Suddenly he remembered that carefree day of limitless hopes long ago when he had planted this patch and neglected it in the distractions of his city business. That was a memory, with certain others, too deep for tears, much too deep for surrender.

Garden pardoned

In the evening, beside his fireplace, he re-read the catalogue, despite its spurious claims, wrote out a lengthy seed order, enclosed a costly cheque and felt like a king signing some prisoner's pardon on the eve of execution.

Against all sense, logic and physical infirmity, there would be another planting and, with the luck of a favorable growing season, another crop, the original springtime rapture renewed, or at least its fading echo.

Today he was seen driving in stakes, measuring the vegetable rows, muttering to himself, mixing up a huge can of spray, mending his tall ladder and behaving in a fashion which, as the neighbors agreed, was innocent but slightly mad.

Victoria Landmarks

In 1853, James Douglas was concerned about the excessive drinking in the Colony of Vancouver Island, and the diary of Robert Melrose, a servant-settler at Craigflower, often noted the individuals, including himself, who were "whole drunk, three-quarters drunk, or half drunk."

But on Wednesday, March 1, 1854, the workers at Craigflower held a scientific meeting. From then, on most Wednesdays in 1854, there was a lecture or a recitation. [illegible] were the pleasures of studying the sciences, the nobility of man, from the flood to the times of Abraham, the propriety of prayer, the wonders of civilization, the inventions of man, the immortality of the soul, and the pressure of the atmosphere.

James Downie gave a recitation rather than a lecture. Robert Melrose seems to have been most interested in geography. He spoke on the earth's diameter, circumference and revolution, and, on various occasions, gave geographical descriptions of England, Scotland, Ireland, Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

But on Wednesday, December 27, 1854, the scientific meeting was postponed until after the daftdays. The "daftdays" as Melrose called them, appear to have started the end of the scientific meetings. The only such meeting in 1855 occurred in late January and was a brief review of ancient and modern Athens.

Daftdays and scientific Wednesdays. Without Robert Melrose, Victorians might not have known about them.

Dreams come true

Once again the Variety Club Telethon has raised over $1 million through the tremendous support of the people of B.C.

We owe British Columbians a deep vote of gratitude for responding to our call in record numbers this year. You have pledged us not only your financial support but, more importantly, your sense of community spirit in helping those less fortunate.

Several years ago Variety Club made a commitment to raise $5 million towards the building of a new Children's Hospital in Vancouver. We have reached that goal and the doors of the hospital open in the fall. Children from all over B.C. will be treated in this marvellous new facility.

Now we have a new goal! Variety Club has committed itself to raise $2 million to provide equipment for Variety Club clinics located within the new Children's Hospital.

To fulfill your Telethon pledge, mail your donation to Variety Club of British Columbia, Box 7400, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 4E2.

Stay with us British Columbia . . . we have work to do together! And thank you for making our dreams come true. — Jeffrey M. Barnett, 1980 Telethon Chairman, Chief Barker, Variety Club of B.C., Tent 47.

Immature art

I was very pleased to read in the Times Dr. Denis Stott's comments on the suggestion by Dr. Hugh Taylor regarding using IQ tests to indicate how a child will perform later in life.

It is most unfortunate that we did not have more 'Dr. Stotts' over the past 60 years to silence the psychologists and their publications based upon exceedingly limited studies of humans and their characteristics.

The fond mamas particularly were sold on "How to bring up your children", by irresponsible individuals who called themselves scientists, when what they were practising was no more than a very immature art.

From this we got the cult of permissiveness; relaxation of high standards of performance and discipline; semi-literate school graduates who have difficulty in communication; sloppy dress and an uncouth appearance. These are not the paths to a higher level of civilization. We can see the results in the ineffectiveness of our federal government, high unemployment in one of the world's richest lands in natural resources, and the staggering growth in our national debt. — W. E. Cowie, 3160 Uplands Road.

Juvenile justice

We understand that the sections of the B.C. Corrections Act limiting the imprisonment of juveniles have been struck down by the Courts.

This means the courts are left with the archaic provisions of the 1908 Juvenile Delinquents Act, where sentences of imprisonment may be imposed on a juvenile for an indefinite period ending only when he becomes an adult at 17 years of age.

Indeterminate sentences for adults have recently been abolished as unjust, but children can still be imprisoned for up to five years for quite trivial offences, or someone's subjective assessment of their attitudes. Youngsters can be subjected to prolonged mental [illegible]ing when they will be released, because they have been labelled uncooperative or unmanageable.

Notwithstanding [illegible] ruling on the act, we ask the B.C judges and probation officers to act in the spirit and intent of the Corrections Act. All other provincial child care facilities and youth programs should be investigated and alternative dispositions presented to the court for consideration before imprisonment is imposed on juveniles.

We urge the Attorney General to establish standards for probation officers to follow in preparing presentence reports before recommending sentencing to a provincial containment facility for juveniles. It is our understanding that many of the referrals to containment centres have been inappropriate. In 75 per cent of the cases referred, the probation officer did not provide the court with any alternatives. Also, in over a quarter of the cases referred the youth was not represented by legal counsel.

The Attorney General should take immediate steps to insure that any child at risk of being sentenced to imprisonment is represented by legal counsel.

The Attorney General should further amend the Corrections Act to ensure that community initiatives toward enlightened treatment of juveniles receive full statutory support. — George Preston, Chairman, Youth Committee, Victoria Area Council, John Howard Society of Vancouver Island.

Efficient changes

You disappointed me when you published only denunciations of further highway construction. Where was your challenge to those environmentalists' hidden values and misleading "facts"?

As a fervent advocate of better and faster highways, I see little but cruelty in the "balance of nature," and nothing but stagnation in M'Gonigle's "ecologically balanced society." Man is more valuable than nature, and has the potential both to change nature for the better and to use it for humanity's enjoyment and benefit. Anything — whether lack of highway access, or prohibitions against in-park motel accommodation — which keeps the average working person from enjoying nature's most attractive sights, is reprehensible.

We do not need public hearings to determine the desirability of new energy and transport projects. Who but corporations and ecology pressure groups has the time or money to spend on them? Do we really expect to outguess the experts, consistently, about the need for such projects? When we listen to the environmentalist lobby, and try to force people to take buses instead of cars to work, look what happens: five-mile, hour-long traffic jams crawling through Massey Tunnel each day. Buses simply cannot compete with the private car.

The government should be building better inter-city highways, restricting intra-city travel to locally-manufactured electric mini-cars (perhaps using the UBC-designed molybdenum disulphide battery), and tying the most densely-populated suburban areas to the downtown core by means of grade-separated monorail or subway. Forget the buses and street trolleys.

Rather like typical Canadian nationalists, these environmentalists denounce their opponents for being "unable to see beyond the mountains" — presumably to the wonderful world of Ontario, Quebec, Europe, and Africa. Garbage. They are only trying to hide from the average person their own insignificance and incompetence.

Many more points could be made against the environmentalist lobby, and in favor of making changes to our environment as efficiently, considerately, and attractively as possible. It is regrettable that your selection of articles did not bring this out. — David F. Holm, 10 Price Road.

Help our own

I am not impressed with the complaint of Ralph Vipond (executive director of the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped) that the government won't put up extra funds to look after the metally handicapped. I'd never heard of the association until the recent publicity concerning its Langwood workshop, and I bet I'm not the only one. On the other hand the needs of boat people and others in foreign lands are constantly before us and get good support from the community.

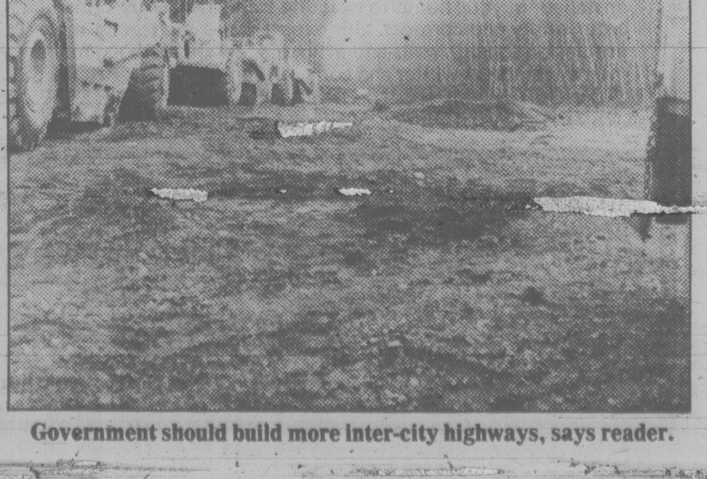
Compared to collecting funds to support the aforementioned charities, collecting money for the handicapped must be like giving away $10 bills at the corner of Fort and Douglas. People go out of their way to help the handicapped; one sees it every day, on buses, on the streets, at intersections and in the many kindnesses offered the handicapped in stores. A budget of $60,000 means about a third of a cent per head for the region. I think piggy banks at Legion stores and a few Saturday afternoons passing the hat at taverns, with the handicapped participating and enjoying the outing, would solve the financial problem. The population of Greater Victoria can look after its handicapped handsomely if only someone in the association would get a program going to collect the funds from the people who care, and I think that's about 200,000 in this area. — W. L. Orr. 550 Hallsor Drive.

Saskatooners

One of Saskatchewan's oldest schools is planning a 70th year reunion next June, during the province's 75th anniversary celebrations.

Nutana Collegiate Institute in Sasktoon is the city's first high school, and has its alumni now spread far and wide around the world.

We are attempting to contact as many of Nutana's former students and teachers as possible, with hopes that they'll be encouraged to return to their home province for this three-day reunion celebration, along with other events planned for Saskatchewan's province-wide celebrations.— Easten Wayman, Publicity Chairman, Nutana Reunion Committee.



Government should build more inter-city highways, says reader.

Triumph of evil

"The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil," wrote Edmund Burke, "is for good men to do nothing."

I like that quotation. (I like the noun "quotation," too, better than "quote," but don't quotate me on that.) That widely known saying by the British political leader of the late 18th century is often used to revile eligible voters who fail to vote, and is used by activists to inveigh against pacifists.

The trouble is that it may be a phoney. When I used the "triumph of evil" quotation recently to condemn complacency, a man named Hamilton A. Long of Philadelphia wrote to ask where and when Burke had said it. I looked for Burke's aphorism in Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, 14th edition: there it was, page 454, cited in a letter from Burke to William Smith on Jan. 9, 1795. Condescendingly, I dropped Long a note telling him to do his homework.

Then the quotation sleuth sprung his trap. "It's not in that letter," Long replied triumphantly. "Nor any other source quoted in the quotations books I've found. They are false sources." He enclosed a letter to himself from the Daughters of the American Revolution, whose president-general, Mrs. Doris Pike White, had said in 1961: "The theme for this year is the old adage, FOR EVIL TO TRIUMPH, GOOD MEN NEED ONLY DO NOTHING, made immortal by Edmund Burke." The DAR historical researcher gave Long the correct quotation (apologizing for the "adage" version) and cited The Great Quotations by George Seldes as her source. Long scrawled across the copy: "Seldes admits he can't find correct reference." Plaintively, the DAR researcher had added:"A pencilled notation in the copy I consulted reads: 'From a letter to Thomas Mercer.' " Replied Long with scorn: "No good."

Putting the irritating Long in his place became important. I wrote the British Library for the citation with which suitable uppance could be forthcoming. The representative of the Head of the Reading Room Information of the Department of Printed Books replied, "I have been unable to discover the source," and directed me to the Library of Congress — presumably because Burke was a noted friend of the colonials.

The Library of Congress phrase-detective crew has been down this trail before; George Seldes warned them about Long's challenge. They directed me to an eminent Burke authority at Amherst College, who turned out to be deceased; that was a dead end.

Meanwhile, over at Bartlett's, the editor working on the next edition came up with a speech Burke gave in Parliament on April 23, 1770, titled "Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents," In that address, the British politician said, "When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle."

I am reluctant to send that almost-in-the-ballpark reference to Hamilton A. Long, who has moved to Windsor, Vt., since he began sending his persnickety post-cards, because I can envision his probable response: "So what? Thousands of people have said something similar. Why are you and the Quotation Establishment attributing this to Burke? If you can't find a source — and I've read every page of his nine volumes of letters — then confess your ignorance and strike the quotation from all the reference books in the future. Stop perpetuating error!"

Let's face it: the collective wisdom of the Quotation Establishment is cringing in fearful confusion before the onslaught of Hamilton A. Long. Here is a man who evidently feels that he owes us, not his industry only, but his judgment; and he betrays instead of serving us if he sacrifices it to our opinion. (Did Burke say something like that to the electors of Bristol? Who can be sure?)

If Burke did not say the "triumph of evil" line, then who did? It's a great notion (see item below), cogently phrased: somebody, somewhere — a parliamentary press agent, a quotation-book blurb writer — deserves great credit.

Seekers after truth, as well as doting quotesmen everywhere, must reluctantly salute the iconbusting Long. The only thing necessary for the triumph of misquotation is for wiseguys to do nothing. Unless some Burkian scholar refutes him with the genuine citation, that chunk of concentrated wisdom directed to "good men" is declared counterfeit. Evil has triumphed; good guys need do nothing. You don't even have to vote this year.

How deep is the notion?

"Why is it," inquires Sondra Mayer of Greak Neck, N.Y., "that no one has any idea, concept or thought anymore? It is now always a 'notion.' It always makes me feel that is the teeniest of ideas."

True; one cannot buy a big idea at a notion counter. That is because the lexicon of what goes on inside the mind is rapidly changing.

For a time, idea had its day. It was the word the Greeks used for "appearance rather than reality." Bright political plans of generations ago were dubbed "the Wisconsin idea" or "the Ohio idea," because the word had more excitement than "plan" or "program." To this day, "idea" remains the encompassing word for imaginative activity, but the lustre seems gone; it's just another thought.

A thought is a brief idea, usually modestly derogated as "just a thought," but deserving of respect because of its contrast with a mere "feeling."

A concept is an idea with big ideas. Of late, academics who had a good thought, or even the makings of an extensive idea, dressed it up as "a concept," or even as part of "a conceptual framework." (Card-carrying members of the Conceptual Frameworkers Union abound in the National Security Council.)

A notion, originally from the Latin verb for "to know," is an idea that has been kicked in the head. The word is now used in attacks on opinions: "The notion that the budget can be balanced" uses the term "notion" to mean "crackbrained idea" or "cockamamie thought."

"Notion" has always been the stepchild of intellect. The element of whim or caprice was long associated with the word, and a product based on a cute or catchy idea became a notion to be sold at a "notions counter." In the product sense, a notion is a knickknack (some word coiner had the notion of making up a word with four k's).

Today, as Sondra Mayer points out, "notion" is in vogue, but it should not be used as a synonym for idea, thought or concept. It's a sneer word, meant to be applied to the quirky noodling that goes on in unthinking minds.

The Spanish correction

"This is a final disconnect notice," writes the New York Telephone Co. What's a "disconnect"? As a noun, the word should be "disconnection." When the verb form — "disconnect" — is used as a noun, you have a linguistic wrong number. The ding-a-ling who wrote that should self-destruct.

"If your service is interrupted," the same ominous notice continues, "restoral charge will apply." The recipient of this strange communication from the communications company was Richard Amdur of Cosmopolitan magazine, who writes, "If I'm not mistaken, the word 'restoral,' used here by the phone company, does not exist."

Right; the word intended is "restoration." The term concocted by the phone company is a good try, on the analogy of "removal," but rings false because there is no need to create a new word when an old one is doing a fine job. (Who would buy tickets for a Restoral comedy?)

However, Vea espanol en el reverso, says the notice in Spanish on the other side. The threat is rendered as Un cargo por reinstalacion aplicara. The translator for the phone company eschewed "restoration," which would have been easy to say in Spanish, and ducked "restoral," whatever that means — choosing instead the easily understood "reinstallation." The translator should be writing the English side, too.

I am responding in this space because when I call Amdur, all I get is a recording.

The first round goes to Rene

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

QUEBEC — The referendum debate began last week in the Quebec National Assembly. Rene Levesque and Claude Ryan were contrasts in style. I think Rene Levesque won on points.

The premier had prepared his text carefully. Throughout the question period before the debate he scribbled away, silently mouthed words, changed, improved his speech till the very moment the Speaker called on him. He stood up, solemn from first to last. He read his speech, something he almost never does. It was an elevated presentation.

The debate which began Tuesday and lasts 35 hours, spread over three weeks, is theoretically not about Quebec's future at all, but simply about the wording of the question on the referendum. The business of the National Assembly is not to take a position on where Quebec should go, but to adopt the text of a referendum question.

Premier Levesque ignored the wording of the question. Someone, later on, can defend it. Premier Levesque knew that hundreds of thousands of people, perhaps millions, would want to see the beginning of the referendum debate. It is rebroadcast on television by Radio-Quebec. So the premier gave a defence of sovereignty-association and of voting yes in the referendum.

Claude Ryan debated the referendum question. He had a written text, but he often departed from it; the total effect was colloquial, unemphatic, dry. While Rene Levesque outlined why the people of Quebec must accede to sovereignty, Claude Ryan tore apart the wording of the question put forward by the government. Rene Levesque called on the people of Quebec to be worthy of their future. Claude Ryan called on the government to put forward an honest question. Mr. Levesque spoke with dignity, attacking no one. Mr. Ryan spoke like an opposition leader, attacking the government and the Parti Quebecois.

Premier Levesque's speech was familiar to political journalists who have followed him over the past year. For the first time in its history, the people of Quebec will be choosing their future. To choose is to exercise maturity. Quebecers might have evolved to independence as did the North American colonies of Britain, Spain and Portugal, but the conquest arrested the colony's normal evolution. Recently, though, spring has set in after the long winter, and Quebec has experienced a cultural renaissance.

Quebec's artists have flowered. Quebec's social legislation is innovative, at the forefront of Canada and the world. Quebecers have proved their competence in public administration, in business. Hydro-Quebec is a world leader in its field. Quebec's resources, including 25 megawatts of electricity, provide it with a secure future.

"Without the hindrances of the federal regime we would be even farther ahead," said Mr. Levesque.

The premier made utterly no appeal to racism, or to a sense of historic grievance. The history of Confederation was largely a misunderstanding, he said: English Canada thought it was getting a centralized state, French Canada thought it was guara[illegible]onomous province. The majority view, of course, prevailed.

The people of Quebec must now correct the historic misunderstanding. All Quebec leaders of the past wanted the same thing, namely, a new agreement with Canada that would make French and English Canada able to deal with each other as equals. What the PQ now proposes to the people of Quebec is simply to "follow in the line of that long and tenacious continuity of Quebec's demands." A majority yes vote in the referendum will allow this old dream to be realized, while a no vote will consecrate Quebecers' state of dependency, of inequality, of a minority.

The premier invited Quebecers to rise above party labels and "fratricidal quarrels" to express a national solidarity of the people of Quebec.

Mr. Ryan argued that Quebec can develop according to its own genius within Canadian federalism. But mostly he set aside these great issues to say why he would oppose the question offered by the government. The PQ, he said, has constantly changed its vocabulary on the object of the referendum. For long it proposed independence as its goal, but now it "camouflages" the goal in a trick question where sovereignists are invited to vote for sovereignty, federalists are asked to affirm their desire for change. If the yes carried, he prophesied, the PQ would then say that the people had really accepted the principle of independence. "The basic objective has never changed over the years," he said. "It is independence."

He countered the call for a yes vote beyond partisanship by pointing out that the government had never consulted the opposition parties on the wording of the question and had never sought for a broad consensus on it. The question, as worded, is the next thing to "imposture, duplicity and fraud."

The Liberal leader repeated the slogan launched at the Liberal convention: Quebec is our homeland, Canada is our country.

How the public will receive the two speeches I cannot be sure. For me, Mr. Levesque's speech was impressive, Mr. Ryan's dull.

Foreign autos making gains

DETROIT (AP) — Foreign makes grabbed 27.0 per cent of the U.S. market in February, up from a record 26.9-per-cent share in January.

Their gains came at the expense of the U.S. producers, whose February sales were off 15 per cent compared with February, 1979, sales figures showed. The total auto market was only 6.7-per-cent smaller as buyers sought out smaller, more efficient cars.

The five U.S. companies sold 588,192 cars last month compared with 665,958 in the same month last year. February had one more selling day this year, so percentage changes are based on sales per day.

The 18 importers who account for virtually all foreign-car sales in the U.S. delivered 217,719 cars compared with 163,218, an increase of 28 per cent.

Last year, imports held 17.5 per cent of the U.S. market in January and 19.7 per cent in February.

The leading importer, Toyota, by itself accounted for more than half the import gain. Toyota sold 59,517 cars in February, an 87 per cent increase from February last year.

Big Three sales fell 17 per cent.

Boeing booming

SEATTLE (AP) — Eastern Airlines and Pan American World Airways ordered a total of 24 Boeing 727 trijets Wednesday worth a total of $406 million, giving a further boost to the hottest-selling commercial airplane in history.

With its order for 16 more trijets worth more than $270 million, Eastern became the second largest customer for the 727 series, said a Boeing spokesman.

Pan American World Airways announced it ordered eight 727s and engine spare parts for $136 million.

Toronto

The Toronto stock market continued to crumble today, sliding below the 2000 level for the first time since Jan. 14 in active mid-afternoon trading.

Trading in shares of Gulfstream Resources Canada Ltd., which was halted this morning, resumed down 1 to $7½.

The company said production tests on four gas-bearing horizons of an exploratory well offshore Qatar resulted in a cumulative daily production rate of 53.8 million cubic feet of gas and 1,654 barrels of condensate.

Gulfstream has 10-per-cent interest in the well.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A plummeted 17 to $116, Gulf Canada 11¾ to $161¼, Cominco 5½ to $65½, Dome Petroleum 5 to $67 and Bow Valley Industries 4½ to $47¾.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 10:52 a.m. PST was 5,520,402 shares.

Of issues traded, 115 advanced, 292 declined and 134 remained unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp led the industrials, remaining steady at $7.45 on 136,170 shares and Keg Restaurants gained a nickel to $1.80 on 5,700. Canadian Javelin Ltd. dropped .05 to $1.55 on 3,250 and Ardiem Industrial Corp. rose .04 to .31 on 3,000. Renn Industries advanced .05 to $1.85 and Taro Industries remained steady at $5.00.

On the resource and development board, Charriot Resources Warrants gained .07 to $1.07 on 55,000 shares and Andex Mines Ltd. advanced .02 to $1.17 on 53,800. Musto Explorations remained steady at $2.30 on 44,600 and Mountaineer Mines dropped a nickel to .70 on 38,700. Quinstar Oil Corp. declined .15 to $2.60 and Silver Standard dropped .08 to $1.97.

Samson Energy Corp. led traders on the curb exchange, gaining a nickel to $1.00 on 284,450 shares and Denver Silver Inc. remained steady at $2.05 on 200,000. Goldstack Resources remained unchanged at $1.05 on 143,500 and Oriana Development dropped .04 to .42 on 76,000. Beach Gold Mines rose .08 to $1.05 and Regal Petroleum remained unchanged at $1.10.

New York

Oil and precious-metals issues were the biggest losers as the stock market continued to slump today.

In the oil group, Mobil was down 1½ to $75⅝; Exxon lost 1 to $59⅞; Texaco dropped 1⅛ to $35⅞, and Standard Oil of Indiana gave up 2⅛ to $99⅜.

Gold stocks showing large losses included Homestake Mining down 4⅝ to $51⅜, Dome Mines 6⅛ to $63⅛ and ASA 2⅝ to $43¾.

Asarco tumbled 5½ to $43¾ and Hecla Mining 5¾ to $38½ among the copper and silver issues.

The decline in the metals stocks was accompanied by a slide in gold, silver and copper prices in commodity markets. Gold fell to about the $580-a-ounce level.

The decline was blamed on a growing belief among traders that a substantial economic slowdown was approaching.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of moderate trading today.

The Financial Times index slipped 5.0 to 450.7.

Industrials, banks and golds declined.

Gravity-defying rates waiting for controls

By LEONARD SILK
New York Times

NEW YORK — The prime interest rate is soaring, and even the bankers are starting to suffer from that ancient psychological affliction known as acrophobia, the fear of heights.

Expectations are widespread that the Carter administration and the Federal Reserve Board are about to impose credit controls. Those expectations are leading to a further burst of business borrowing before a crackdown comes. The more the president delays, the more frantic the borrowing becomes.

How long will it be before the curtain comes down on this phase of an increasingly disorderly boom? Where, above the clouds, is the peak? Nobody pretends any longer to know. The experts have been wrong so many times before that they are fudging all their forecasts.

Leif Olsen, chairman of Citibank's economic policy committee, says he regards the existing level of interest rates as "very unusual" and "not sustainable." Not only nominal rates but "real" rates of interest — the difference between the expected rate of inflation and the rate of interest — are at historic heights, says Olsen. He assumes that the actual rate of inflation, as measured by the price index used to deflate the gross national product, will be no more than 11 percent this year. So, with the prime rate above 17 percent, a real interest rate of at least 6 percent is now being paid by the banks' most creditworthy customers.

But this does not mean that the banks are in ecstasy over their present or pending profits. On the contrary, bank profits are being squeezed because borrowing costs have been outpacing lending rates. Bank stocks are selling, on the average, at such low multiples as 4½ times earnings. Citibank itself is selling at a price-earnings ratio of four. Chase Manhattan, its big New York competitor, is also selling at four times earnings. These are not multiples that suggest market expectations of climbing bank profits.

Although they are unlikely to be found lobbying for credit controls — the very word "controls" goes against their economic religion — more and more bankers are privately saying they would favor credit controls, if they were the right kind of controls. Olsen, for instance, would want them to be as broad as possible, establishing overall asset-to-capital ratios. These, he said, would be much easier for the banks to manage than if they had to conform to a mass of detailed credit ceilings administered by a large bureaucracy.

It is almost as though many bankers and big-business men want credit controls to save them from themselves. But the Federal Reserve is dragging its heels against departing from its policy of "expensive easy money," as Arthur Okun, a former chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, calls it. For this reason, he expects to see interest rates climb to peaks that "will never be surpassed in my lifetime or the lifetime of anyone now alive."

But expensive easy money has not been working to choke off borrowing and put the economy into recession. To be sure, the recession might be about to start. Housing has already come down, and worrried economists of the National Association of Home Builders now fear that housing starts could fall to one million units by the spring. Sales of domestic autos have flopped, but that seems to be the result of consumers' preference for smaller fuel-efficient cars, rather than expensive credit, as witnessed by the continuing strength of foreign-car sales. For the broad range of all manufactured goods, new factory orders have been surging. The just-released January gain of 3.6 percent was the biggest gain in more than a year, and there is still no evidence of a letup.

Meanwhile, Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve, has continued to hold out against credit controls, and President Carter seems unwilling to go up against him. The president could "authorize" Volcker to impose controls on credit, but as long as Volcker resists, Carter appears unwilling to try to force him.

The credit markets simply cannot believe that credit controls are not coming. A week ago Thursday, there was a joyous, but aborted, rally in the bond market on rumors that the administration was about to call for credit controls.

In the absence of stronger government restraints, it is difficult to say how much longer interest rates can go on defying gravity. Some analysts think the prime rate could go to 20 percent, at which height acrophobia could become so extreme as to induce a plunge. That is the secret fear that haunts those comfortable upstairs offices in the banks — the fear that a switch by consumers from spending to saving, an inability of retailers and others close to the consumer to earn back those astronomical interest rates, followed by inventory-cutting and order-canceling, would culminate in a crash. If this credit boom is not slowed down soon, even the most cautious of bank economists are starting to say, it will wind up in a bust.

Corporations find it's hard raising funds

By BARBARA BRY
Los Angeles Times

A few months ago, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. planned a $300 million, 40-year debenture offering at the end of February.

About a week before the issue date, however, PT and T altered the offer to include $100 million in intermediate-term eight-year notes with the balance of $200 million in 40-year bonds.

The reason: Investment bankers warned the company that with inflation running at an annual rate of about 16 percent, investors are reluctant to tie up their money for 25 to 40 years. That resistance has brought upheaval in the bond market, causing prices to plunge and interest rates to escalate.

For PT and T that was not the end. Just two days before the offering, the San Francisco-based utility had to change its mix again. This time it reduced the long-term portion further to $100 million, and increased the amount of notes to $200 million.

Once PT and T's single-A rated bonds reached the market, they sold out quickly and for good reason: they offered investors a whopping 15.55 percent return on the 40-year debentures and 15.125 on the notes.

What happened to PT and T during that foray into the market illustrates the uncertainty facing corporations today when they want to raise money.

With the bond market in chaos, it is no surprise that companies are exploring alternate means of raising capital. In general, they are pursuing three strategies: Issuing medium-term (instead of long-term) debt securities such as PT and T's; increasing short term bank borrowings, and floating more common equity.

Of the three, the increase in equity offerings has been the most stunning spinoff of the bond market's collapse.

Nigel MacEwan, director of the financing division of Merrill Lynch White Weld Capital Markets Group, says his New York-based investment banking firm, a unit of Merrill Lynch and Co., managed or co-managed more industrial common stock offerings in dollars in January than it handled during all of 1979.

In January the group raised $209 million in two common stock issues compared with $195 million in eight offerings during 1979.

MacEwan says the trend is continuing. February underwriting was strong and the March calendar "looks heavy."

"It's an excellent time for companies to issue equity," MacEwan says. "The stock market is up and investor receptivity is high."

Fred Krimm, first vice president of the corporate finance department of Bateman Eichler Hill Richards Inc. in Los Angeles, says three industries dominate the list of equity issues. They are energy-related companies, high-technology businesses whose growth rate will not be impaired by a recession, and a few other companies with "sex appeal," such as hospital management firms and cable television companies.

Their common stock is generally selling at much higher price-earnings multiples than those of most companies, which makes it cheaper for them to raise money through equity rather than debt.

For example, Krimm notes, New Orleans-based J. Ray McDermott and Co., an offshore oil drilling company that sold about $132.5 million in common equity last week, currently sells at 56 times earnings (compared with an average of about 8.8).

As an alternative to new stock offerings, companies are borrowing from banks in record amounts. Despite Federal Reserve Board attempts to tighten credit, big money-center banks are experiencing heavy volumes.

Corporate financial strategy today is to borrow short term as long as long-term interest rates hold their lofty levels. When those rates decline, companies plan to refinance their short-term loans. The object, obviously, is to avoid locking in high interest costs for 25 or 40 years. Of course, if rates do not decline, the strategy may backfire and companies may wish they had issued long-term bonds now.

UVic credit courses pirated from skies

Some B.C. cablevision companies are pirating televised University of Victoria extension courses relayed by satellite to five centres across the province.

And Glen Farrell, director of UVic's extension department, is wondering what liability the university may face through the abuse of copyright privileges.

Farrell said the university has paid between $500 to $1,000 for copyrights of material used in two Faculty of Education credit courses that are broadcast every Thursday from the B.C. Institute of Technology in Burnaby to classrooms in Terrace, Port Alberni, Prince George, Dawson Creek and Cranbrook.

However, he said, he has learned some cablevision companies are intercepting the signals and showing the programs to subscribers.

He fears the publishers of the material for which copyrights have been obtained may be upset over the wider dissemination of the programs than the university had indicated in its application and thus demand higher fees.

But Frank Keyes, special adviser to the federal government on copyright law, believes the university has nothing to worry about.

Keyes, who was in Victoria last week attending a conference on law and universities, said if there was any liability it would probably rest with the cablevision companies and not UVic.

However, Keyes conceded the law is vague about copyrights in such cases.

Canada's copyright law is unchanged since 1924 and therefore says nothing about satellite communications.

Farrell said the university is "trying to be innovative without stepping on anyone's toes," but felt the copyright law a, "tangled web that gives little guidance."

However, the conundrum isn't about to force the university to stop broadcasting the credit courses, the first in Canada delivered by satellite.

Alert Bay relates history of suffering

ALERT BAY (CP) — The man conducting an inquiry into health services at this remote village says he has been stirred by the sometimes tearful testimony presented to him.

During the last week, Dr. Gary Goldthorpe has heard stories of suffering dating as far back as a smallpox epidemic 200 years ago at this community on Cormorant Island off northern Vancouver Island.

"It's been very moving," he said in an interview. "People are sharing their pain and suffering and you can't help as a human being to share those feelings, the loss of loved ones.

"There is a great pent-up anger and frustration in this community which is based on suffering."

Goldthorpe, a doctor for 20 years, has been an independent consultant in Indian health services in northern Quebec and at Sioux Lookout, Ont. The inquiry was set up by the federal health ministry following Indian demands for a review of health services here.

Dr. Goldthorpe said the most troubling aspect of the inquiry to date is the split in the community, partly along racial lines, over the competence of Dr. Jack Pickup and the community's small hospital.

Indian leaders have demanded Pickup's removal and were outraged last year when the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons said he was "more than competent" to practise after an inquest into the death of an 11-year-old Indian girl who had a ruptured appendix found him to be negligent in treating her.

Dr. Goldthorpe said many Indians feel that the mechanisms normally available for getting rid of an unwanted doctor have failed.

One route is the college which can suspend his licence. The other is the hospital which can refuse admitting privileges to a doctor and effectively shut down his practice.

However, the nine-member board of St. George's Hospital here still has only two trustees from the local Nimpkish band despite a recent restructuring to provide more Indian representation.

Goldthorpe said it is "a difficult challenge to have appropriate elements of both communities."

"Indian people don't have the same political traditions so some compromises have to be made in institutional forms."

The commissioner said he hopes the hearings have vented some of the anger in the community and his report will form a basis for positive steps.

"I'm hopeful. There is immense energy here and intensity. Through the process of communication here, people are learning a lot more about health and health services."

Next week he has scheduled public workshops featuring people with expertise in setting up Indian-run health facilities.

Meanwhile, a search continues for doctors to serve the community.

Dr. Pickup says he feels a sense of responsibility to serve the "90 or maybe 85 per cent of the people who are confident in me" but is searching for a replacement for himself. He has indicated he will retire or move his practice as soon as he finds a replacement.

Remember! If you move notify the post office

Change of address cards should be filed with Canada Post to assure prompt forwarding of mail to people who have moved, says Canada Post said.

A spokesman said many people are moving without filing cards.

The post offices no longer give directory service to domestic mail so the only method of forwarding mail efficiently is if people who move file a change of address.

There is a $1 charge for this service and mail will be forwarded for 90 days. Change of address cards are supplied so individual correspondents can be notified.

New office aids ethnic groups

A new secretariat in the Ministry of Provincial Secretary and Government Services has been created with duties to include co-ordination of policies and programs for ethnic groups.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe said the creation of the secretariat came out of work already done by the government and the Affiliation of Multicultural Societies.

"My ministry is uniquely able to work with other ministries in co-ordinating and developing policies and programs for ethnic groups in the 1980s and beyond," he said.

The government and the affiliation were involved in a conference a year ago called Toward a Provincial Multicultural Policy.

"That conference provided the government with advice from all ethnic organizations in the province. We had recommendations dealing with the arts, the education system, social services, business and the media," said Wolfe.

No exact budget has been assigned to the new secretariat, he said, although funds for ethnic organizations are available through other ministries.

The recommendations from the conference dealt with the substance of government attitudes and programs rather than funding needs, he said.

"We believe that it is probably a greater challenge to work on these fundamentals than simply to make substantial new funding available."

Shortage adds to fish woes

By MIKE HUGHES

The B.C. roe herring fishery creaks along today but remains hobbled by a price dispute and a sharp drop in the predicted number of fish showing up.

Only one area remained open as the federal fisheries department attempts to balance the available catch in a given area with the packers and processors able to handle the fish.

Members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood voted Sunday to reject another price offer, this one from two independent companies.

As a result, some processing plants continue to be picketed by the union members and union-crewed packers remain idle.

The union-brotherhood membership represents an estimated 30 per cent of the herring fleet of 1,550 boats.

The latest offer, rejected by the fishermen, was from Quality Fish Co. and J. Griffith Co., both of Delta.

They offered to pay $765 a ton for gillnet-caught herring and $400 for fish caught by seiners.

On Friday, union-brotherhood members voted 71 per cent to reject an offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C. for $650 a ton for gillnetters and $350 a ton for the seiners.

The only area open today was from Comox to Qualicum Beach where 300 gillnetters were operating with packing facilities for 3,000 tons.

The latest figure from fisheries was that 100 tons had been taken out of the area since it was opened Sunday and it was to close later today.

Meanwhile, fears that this year's available stock of herring would be lower than last year's are being borne out at this stage.

A fisheries spokesman said there is no question that the predicted number of fish have not shown up. But he added there could be a later wave of spawning herring.

The UFAWU has sent a telegram to federal fisheries minister Romeo Le Blanc asking him to close the fishery entirely because of the stocks problem.

"Herring stock surveys confirm the union's worst fears of herring resource decimation," the telegram said, adding that the union fleet had tied up "rather than risk further depletion at the prices offered."

Suit fights dental fees

The co-operative insurance firm which covers about one-fifth of all British Columbians under dental care policies has mounted a three-pronged attack against B.C. dentists' recently-announced fee increases.

CU&C Health Services has filed a civil suit in B.C. Supreme Court against the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons, general manager Dave Schreck said today.

It has also filed a formal complaint with the combines investigation branch in Ottawa, asking the federal government to investigate the college's recommendation to dentists for a 12-per-cent hike.

And Health Minister Rafe Mair has been asked to amend the Dentistry Act, which was changed in 1976 to allow the college to issue unilaterally a fee guide without negotiating with consumers or the government.

Schreck said it will be some time before CU&C's case is heard in court.

"I would imagine if we win the college would appeal," he added.

CU&C has 150,000 members in its dental plan. With dependents, about 400,000 British Columbians are covered.

take a taxi," Mrs. Stuart said.

Most of the residents don't drive cars and some can't take the bus because of physical disabilities.

The building has a homelike atmosphere because residents look after each other and regard their neighbors down the hall as family.

"Everyone here takes care of everyone else. When you get as old as some of the people here, you have no friends except your neighbors.

"This building is something they should have more of, not tear down," Mrs. Stuart said.

Few of the residents are looking forward to moving because they don't want to lose their friends, she said.

"It doesn't matter how good the meals are — they would be strangers in a strange place," she said.

In the main floor kitchen staff member Joan Hand said hotel workers have taken up the fight.

Some staff members have been working at the hotel for 15 and 20 years and are devoted to all the residents, said Hand, who has been an employee there three years.

The government's decison to close the facility demonstrates a lack of feeling for the people involved, she said.

"There's no Mrs. Bennett or Mrs. Fraser in here," Hand said.

And Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson said the government's decision to spend $180,000 on a condemned building doesn't make sense.

It will only cost $500,000 to complete the necessary repairs and keep it operating.

He was missing something until he began giving

By BRENDA DALGLISH

David Durrance thinks he's found the secret to happiness and self-fulfilment.

"As soon as I started giving instead of taking, that feeling I'd always had, that something was missing from my life, went away," Durrance said.

Durrance has been doing a lot of giving in the last few years.

In 1973 the then 33-year-old former school teacher happened upon a group of primitive people in the northern mountain areas of the Philippines. He said they seemed to need his help far more than anyone else he'd ever known.

Durrance, whose experiences were reported last summer in the Times, is back in Victoria to raise more funds to keep his small organization in the Philippines going.

The people, whose most respected members just 10 years ago were head-hunters, are malnourished and uneducated.

As Durrance explains it, they are caught in a cycle of events they can't control, like their fathers and their fathers' fathers before them.

"Their life is pure drudgery; they do nothing from the time they are old enough to walk but work at trying to survive."

Durrance began by sponsoring individual children, providing enough money so they could get some extra education.

But now he needs money for more ambitious projects and is back in Victoria for a few months to raise it.

Durrance, whose family home is at 3721 Saanich Rd., is looking for people willing to volunteer their time and skills to go back to the Philippines with him to teach and work in the school and medical clinic he's established.

In fact his first volunteer from Victoria has already left. A nurse who read about his work is spending several months at the clinic.

He also needs money, he said, either direct sponsorship of a child's secondary or post-secondary education in one of the cities in the Philippines or general donations to be used for any of a number of projects he has planned.

Terraced rice fields in the Philippines

Durrance was home last fall and collected about $5,000 and donations of clothing, foodstuffs and medicines.

In fact, he laughs about his last trip back to the Philippines. He'd been given a large donation of vitamin pills by the Parke Davis pharmaceutical company and he dumped all of them into his suitcase.

He had no clothes, no books, just a large suitcase full of unidentified pills, he said. He expected to have difficulty getting through customs with his admittedly suspicious luggage but the bag was never opened.

Education is the only way to improve the people's lives, Durrance believes.

For now that means teaching just the very basics of agriculture, medicine and sanitation to the people.

Their diet is very restricted. They eat rice, which they grow on terraced land passed down through families for centuries, beans, a sweet potato-like vegetable called camote supplemented ocassionally by things like beetles and tadpoles.

One of Durrance's first efforts was to introduce a variety of fruits and vegetables he hopes can be grown in the area. He's trying crops such as peanuts, soya beans (so far unsuccessfully), onions, cabbage, coconuts, oranges and watermelons.

Two of the children he's sponsored through school, one now a trained nurse, have returned to help him at the clinic he's established in Segada.

He has 43 people sponsoring children now but there are many more who would like to be able to continue their education, he said.

Their parents recognize the need for it, even though they can't afford to let their children continue past the government's free classes that end at about the Grade 6 level, said Durrance.

With the money he's received he chooses some of the most intelligent children and sends them on to boarding school and post-secondary education. He says he hopes that they'll return to their families and villages when they're finished and share their knowledge.

The cost of sponsoring a child is $18 a month, and he's arranged to have the children correspond with their sponsors.

He's established an organization called the International Association for the Transformation of Man, a registered Canadian charitable organization, through which all sponsorships and donations are funnelled.

Anyone wanting more information (Durrance is willing to talk and give a slide presentation about his experiences for schools and other organziations) or wishing to donate any kind of assistance should contact him at 382-7647.

In case you're wondering

As a newcomer to the Saanich Peninsula I would like to learn about the railway lines which used to cover this area. I am told there used to be three which could be heard from Royal Oak.

The original train to the north end of the Saanich Peninsula was the Victoria and Sidney line, the history of which is outlined in George Hearn and David Wilkie's book The Cordwood Ltd.

Ignoring a better route to the west and a still better route to the east, it went through the middle of Saanich and centres of commerce at Keating, Saanichton and Royal Oak.

The first V and S station was on the north side of Hillside Avenue, about halfway between Douglas and what was then Rose Street.

A downtown depot was later built on Fisgard Street at the rear of the old Market building. This terminus might have been handy for farmers bringing their produce to town but it wasn't good railroading. Trains had to start on an upgrade and there was a sharp turn at Blanshard and Fisgard.

A new $17,000 ticket office and waiting room was built in 1910 on Blanshard at the site of the present Bay parking lot.

The tracks ran along Blanshard to Queens, down Rose and Bay, then up Rose to Market where another turn took them past a freight yard and turntable to the main line. A list of stations included Victoria, Hillside Avenue, Royal Oak, Beaver Lake, Elk Lake, Keating, Saanichton and Sidney.

The last run of the V and S was April 30, 1919.

The B.C. Electric Saanich Interurban began operating June 18, 1913, and was built for more than $500,000. It closed Oct. 31, 1924.

Trains left the depot at 1505-1517 Douglas (between Pandora and Cormorant), going along Cormorant to Douglas to Fisgard toward Pembroke. After crossing Queens, the trains made their first stop at Harriet Road. The next station was Tillicum.

At this point the line left the public roads and entered its own right-of-way, now named Interurban Road. The next stops were Marigold Road and Wilkinson Road, followed by Glynn, Eberts, Westwoodvale, Goward, Picken, Prospect Lake, Heals, Durrance Road and Brentwood. It then went along what is now Wallace Drive with stations at Bazan Bay, Tripp, Sidneyway, Meadlands, Patricia Junction, Mallowmot, Tatlow amd, finally, Deep Bay.

The third line to operate on the peninsula was the Canadian National Railway, originally called the Canadian North Pacific. The first trains began running in April, 1917.

The main station was on Alpha Street near Burnside and there were others at the junction near the present Town and Country shopping centre, North Quadra, Cordova, Sayward, Martindale, Michell, Saanich, Bazan, East Road, Range Road and Patricia Bay.

Victoria economy blooms early

The Victoria economy was so strong in February that it might as well be spring.

"It didn't seem like a winter month at all in terms of economic performance," local Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering said today.

The number of new jobs increased and the number of unemployed fell.

By summer standards it was only fair but as a winter month it was excellent, he said.

There were 602 new jobs listed on the CEC board during the month, up from 583 the previous February.

The number of job-seekers totalled 9,747, down from 10,262 at the same time last year.

Restaurant receipts were up 15 per cent and retail sales increased between 10 and 12 per cent.

Hotel occupancy rates were well above last February's levels. One hotel reported getting close to sold-out status over two weekends during the month.

The shipyard continues to be a source of strength. There were 725 employed at Burrard Yarrows Corporation (Esquimalt) during the month, up from 450 last February.

There has been a moderate increase in construction activity in the residential sector while on the commercial - industrial front it continues at about the same pace as last year.

Some condominums and townhouses are being built but no apartments. There is no sign of improvement in the district's tight rental situation for the balance of the year.

Real estate sales continue to soar.

Consumer confidence continues to be high. Most large stores reported revenue increases of at least 10 per cent although some small shops reported sales were disappointing.

Property tax boost likely for transit

By PAT DUFOUR

The Capital Regional District probably will have to increase property taxes to pay the first year's $2.2 million deficit when it takes over regional transit from B.C. Hydro on April 1.

Board chairman Jim Campbell conceded today it is unlikely the provincial cabinet will agree to the regional board's decision to cover the deficit through a surcharge on electricity bills when it discusses the issue Tuesday.

Campbell said Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm made it clear to himself and Sidney mayor Norma Sealey, chairman of the regional district's transit committee, he is opposed.

Campbell also admitted it had been reported to him that electoral area directors will walk out of any meeting that votes to pay the transit deficit through an increase of three cents a gallon for gasoline and diesel fuel.

"It has been reported to me," he said. "I would be unable to do anything about it except acknowledge the rules would make it impossible (without a quorum).

"I hope the government will change its position and allow a Hydro tax for the first year on the grounds that in order to have a reasonably unanimous position by the elected officials it is necessary."

hydro hike opposed

If the cabinet doesn't support the hydro increase, he said he has no idea what the board will do.

Campbell said the board proposal to cover the deficit by increased Hydro costs, split 50-50 between commercial and residential users, would mean an increase of $1 per month per household.

The dilemma, he said, is that if a gasoline tax is used it would bear more heavily on residents in outlying areas where public transit is less available.

On the other hand, Campbell said, residents in such areas as Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt would be hardest hit by increased property taxes.

UVic students seek freeze on tuition fees

More than 1,700 students have signed a petition seeking a freeze on University of Victoria tuition fees.

The document and a request for the provincial government to pick up higher UVic operating costs was to be delivered to the university president's office this afternoon.

Alma Mater Society vice-president Terry Johnson said a student rally at noon was to give final endorsation of the move before a delegation goes to Dr. Howard Petch's office.

The protest is aimed at UVic board of governors, who await a study on student fees which may contain a recommendation to change means of assessment.

Students object to both an increase in the amount of fees now levied, and to a proposal adopted by University of B.C. by which tuition is tied to the operating costs of the university.

TEETERING TO A TITLE: Determined to trap local teeter-tottering title, these four girls seesawed more than half a day, spurred on by parents and friends Saturday at Ambassador Park. Well-padded posteriors and a ready supply of snacks helped sustain the girls, who gave themselves five-minute breaks every two hours. But 12-year-old Mindy Dick (forefront) grew weary after 14 hours of vertical reciprocation and her place was taken by a substitute. Corinna Nieman, Sonja Veerkamp and Pam Vagels, all 11, claim the city teetering title with 16½ hours. (John McKay photo)

A grunt or a laugh?

If you come across someone nursing a bruised posterior — or laughing uproariously — he might have something to do with a couple of bizarre thefts in the city on Sunday.

A goat named Grunt was stolen from the backyard of a house at 578 John, and owner Dave Simm says his long-haired alpine friend is anything but friendly.

Simm says he brought his year-old goat home Sunday night to give him a wash and shampoo. Grunt normally resides on a farm in Sooke and isn't that used to people.

He put Grunt in the backyard and shortly before midnight noticed the gate was open.

Grunt may be smart, but not that smart; he had to have help.

The animal is about two feet tall with long ears, long curly hair and — this is the part that hurts — powerful black horns.

In the other theft six tanks of nitrous oxide or laughing gas were stolen from a storage room at Victoria General Hospital.

Police said the thieves could be in for an unpleasant surprise if they try to remove the gas without a regulator. The gas is under 2,200 pounds pressure. And that is no laughing matter.

The theft of the laughing gas was noticed by VGH employees shortly before noon Sunday.

Thieves broke a small hole in a back door of a storage room off Humboldt.

Four of the tanks were relatively small — measuring two feet by four feet — and could be hand-carried, but the other two were twice the size and normally require two men and a dolly to move.

Take heart on those draw tickets

By PAUL MINVIELLE

So you won five free tickets in a Western Express lottery draw when your ticket matched the last three digits of a winning number.

While you weren't quite as delighted as if you'd won the hundred thousand, you figured it was better than nothing, right?

Chances are if you hit the wrong retailer, however, he said: "Sorry. We're short of tickets. You'll have to mail your ticket to Winnipeg."

Notice, he said "short," not "out."

So you protested and you stamped your feet and still the man said no, waving a B.C. Lotteries bulletin under your nose.

Take heart. B.C. Lotteries Branch director Jim Taylor says he's going to set it all straight.

The bulletin states that increasing public demand for Western Express tickets has created a shortage, with no relief in sight for seven to eight weeks.

The bulletin [illegible] that the situation has been [illegible] by the five free tickets being issued to holders of tickets on which the last three digits correspond to one of the winning numbers.

"Therefore," reads the bulletin, "it is strongly suggested that distributors make a determined effort to contact all retailers and instruct them to advise the general public to mail their last three digit winning tickets directly to the Western Canada Lottery Foundation."

The Times asked Taylor what justification there could be for making winners wait for their five free tickets when the instructions on the reverse of the tickets says freebies can be picked up at any participating retailer.

Taylor said the bulletin only went out because of the ticket shortage, and it was never intended to prevent retailers from doling out the free tickets if they had tickets.

Then why can't a winner pick up his five free tickets if they're sitting right there on the counter?

"He can," Taylor replied. "There's no question whatsoever about that."

When told many retailers were using his branch's bulletin as justification for not giving out the tickets, Taylor said: "I'll have a bulletin out today turning that around."

Composure a talking point with Vikettes

HALIFAX — It isn't so in libraries, but in basketball circles talking can be almost as beneficial as scoring a field goal.

"We talked about it a lot," admitted Kathy Shields, coach of the University of Victoria Vikettes, the newly-crowned Canadian intercollegiate women's basketball champions. The talking helped keep their minds on it.

"It" was the composure the Vikettes had to display Saturday, when it counted, as the Canada West representatives came from behind in the second half to defeat Dalhousie Tigers 64-59 and bring the Bronze Baby trophy to Victoria.

"We were tight," said Shields of Vikettes' first-half performance that allowed the underdog Tigers to grab a 35-27 half-time lead before about 4,600 fans. "The crowd, naturally, worked against us. But I knew that if we kept our heads we had to start playing. I also figured that if Dalhousie got behind, they might panic."

Determined and disciplined, and always showing the composure that clearly stamps Vikettes as the best in the land, UVic, trailing by 15 at one stage, came back to tie the score nine minutes into the second half. The Vikettes quickly took the lead for the first time and doggedly protected it the rest of the way.

"Everybody really came through, and I'm glad. They've worked hard all year, and not just for one half of the last game," added Canada's university coach-of-the-year.

"Carol (Turney-Loos) was Carol. She was a bit tight on offense because she wanted to win this so badly. But she held things together and played tremendous defence.

"Luanne Hebb (who scored 15 of her 19 points in the second half) got us going.

"Tracie McAra had a great second half (scoring all eight of her points in the stretch) and Sandy Lewis (with 14 points) had an outstanding game. Sandy was perhaps our most consistent player, and kept us in the game in the first half by going to the boards.

"Donna Digby, only 18, came off the bench and hit for some great pressure points, including four in the final minute.

"Jane Boe didn't get to play in the last game in the Canada West final but came in for eight minutes, when Tracie drew three quick fouls, and helped keep us in the game."

Turney-Loos, wrapping up a magnificent collegiate career, scored 14 points and was acclaimed as the most-valuable player of the tournament. The hard-working Hebb was named to the all-Canada team along with Janis Paskevich of Calgary and three Dalhousie players — Anne Lindsay, Jill Tasker and Anna Pendergast.

Lindsay was the top scorer for the Tigers with 19 while Tasker and Pendergast each had 14.

Vikettes lost only one of their 41 games this season and will be back for the next campaign with almost an intact lineup. Turney-Loos is the only player graduating. Hebb, McAra, Lewis, Boe, Digby, Sue Shaw, Cindy Smith, Karen Packalen, Janine Prince and Jamie Mackie all are eligible to return.

Calgary Dinnies built up a 42-16 half-time lead and coasted to a 69-43 win over Laurentian Vees to take third place in the tournament. Paskevich paced the Dinnies with 19 points while Lori Chizik added 18.

In the consolation final, Bishops Gaiters beat University of Guelph Gryphons 70-54.

Seasprays labor to beat Labs

Victoria Seasprays had to work harder than usual in the second contest but still notched two weekend victories to push their unbeaten string to six games in the Pacific Northwest Field Lacrosse League.

Seasprays tripped Coquitlam Labatts 11-8 in their closest decision this season before about 350 fans Sunday at Centennial Stadium.

The Victoria club posted a 29-13 win over North Shore Indians before about 200 spectators on the same field Saturday.

Jim Lynch scored three goals and had four assists while Kevin Alexander also notched three goals to lead the win over Labatts, who trailed by quarter scores of 4-0, 6-3 and 8-4.

Mike Thomas added two goals and singles were contributed by Larry Bell, Art Webster and Tarey Pollock, who also had three assists and was named the No. 1 star of the game.

Walt Christianson anchored the Seaspray defence.

Danny Wilson scored twice and had three assists for the plucky Coquitlam crew while Paul Parnell fired two and singles came from Randy Delmonico, Ian McNaughton, Mark Valastin and Matt Atkin.

Both goaltenders — Mike Simmons of Victoria and Doug Sato of Coquitlam — played outstanding games.

On Saturday, Alexander led the way with eight goals while Bill Marechek had four. Webster and Lynch added three each, doubles came from Tom Woods, Thomas, Bell and Pollock and singles were contributed by Jeevan Dillon, Ron Brown and Gord Christians.

Wayne and Gary Baker scored five goals each to lead the Indians.

Vikings survive Dinosaur uprising

Prior to the start of the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball final series, Calgary Dinnosaur coach Gary Howard accepted "the blame" for Victoria Vikings' perfect (22-0) run through the regular season.

"My fault," he said. Calgary had the talent to spoil it for the Vikings but "we had trouble blending the old people with the new. I have to take the blame."

And, he continued, if "Vikings should ever become complacent, they could lose the (final) series."

UVic didn't, but Dinosaurs' stirring second-half run at the Vikings on Saturday certainly supported some of Howard's theories about his talent.

Vikings, 82-63 winners Friday, wrapped up the best-of-three series with an 80-76 decision Saturday at McKinnon Gym. Thus the Vikings advance to the national tournament in Calgary, starting Thursday, as CWUAA champions and the Dinosaurs qualify as the hosts.

Shooting a sensational 72 per cent from the field, Vikings built up a 52-30 half-time lead. Then Victoria's second-half slackening, aided by foul problems in the physical game, brought on a sampling of Calgary's talent.

Victoria veteran Reni Dolcetti went to the bench with four fouls with just under seven minutes played in the final half and Gerald Kazanowski followed with about seven minutes left in the game. By time Dolcetti returned, Calgary wiped out Victoria's 22-point advantage and had closed to within seven.

Momentum then deserted Calgary and Vikings weathered the storm with coach Ken Shields fielding all five of his graduating veterans — Dolcetti, Billy Turney-Loos, Chris Hebb, Ian Hyde-Lay and Mickey Welder - for the last minute.

"We came out a little dozy in the second half," said Sheilds. "I should have kept my mouth shut. I told them not to let down. That's just what happened."

Vikings' big plus was their depth and 65 per cent overall shooting percentage. UVic also out-rebounded Calgary 28-22 but committed 21 turnovers to Calgary's 12.

Loos (15), Dolcetti (10), Kazanowski (11) and Kelly Dukeshire (11) all hit in the double figures while Karl Tilleman (18) and Romel Raffin (17) shouldered the brunt of Calgary's offense.

Cats squander a great chance

Victoria Cougars fired 93 of the 123 shots taken during Saturday's Western Hockey League shootout at Memorial Arena with New Westminster Bruins. Of the total, 61 Victoria shots were on target but the Cougars managed only six goals, enough for a 6-3 victory.

A gallant effort by Bruin netminder Geoff Murdoch, a Victoria product, kept the Cougars from running up double figures and Victoria coach Jack Shupe admitted "this isn't the kind of team that takes advantage of its chances."

How true.

Tim Muc was on the firing line Sunday in New Westminster and the Cougars unloaded 37 shots his way. Victoria, however, managed only goals by rookies Darryl Coldwell and Mark Morrison and dropped a 3-2 decision — their first in 15 games against the Bruins this season.

It turned out to be a costly night of missed advantages.

Among the glaring ones was Victoria winger Torrie Robertson's try for a goal that might have forced sudden-death overtime. With just about a minute left in the game, Muc was down and out of the play. Robertson missed the wide-open net.

With that, Cougars' last good hope of salvation went out of the window.

The loss prevented the Cougars from gaining on the front-running Portland Winter Hawks. Fortunately for the Cougars, the Winter Hawks also blew an advantage when upset 2-1 by the Breakers in Seattle.

As a result, the Hawks still remain five points up on Victoria but the Cougars have four games in hand. And that sets the stage for one of the biggest games of the season at Memorial Arena. The Hawks come around Tuesday evening for a game that may go a long way in deciding first place in the Western Division.

The two contenders have one other game — March 19 in Portland. The advance ticket sale for the game in Portland has already hit the 4,000 mark.

Two marks went into the books as a result of the Memorial Arena game. The win was 28th at home, a Victoria record, while Bruins hit a league futility mark by suffering their 56th loss. The previous record of 55 losses in a season was set in 1972-73 by Vancouver Nats.

Seattle achieved its victory Sunday without former Canadian Olympic team forward Glen Anderson. Anderson scored a goal and assist in his debut with the Breakers last week.

However, New Westminster's Ernie McLean, acting chairman of the WHL's management committee said Sunday the Breakers did not comply with regulations for players of the Canadian Olympic team as set down by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the WHL. Anderson, therefore, is ineligible.

Ojibway jumper jolts the ski elite

LAHTI, Finland (AP) — Steve Collins, a 15-year-old Ojibway Indian from Thunder Bay, Ont., set the World Cup ski jumping elite back on their collective heels Sunday with a record-smashing jump off the 90-metre hill.

The Canadian teenager caught a "good wind" and soared 124 metres, breaking the old hill mark set by 1978 world champion Tapio Raisanen of Finland.

Olympic gold-medallist Jouko Tormanen of Finland finished a distant second with 114.5 metres after organizers decided to suspend jumping because of the increased wind velocity.

Collins, who collected 146 points for his one effort, finished a whopping 14.3 points ahead of Tormanen while Austrian Hubert Neuper placed third.

Collins, who shows absolutely no fear on the hill, was staggered by the attention he attracted Sunday — not just from the crowds on the hill by the media who pressed around later.

The jump — 124 metres, the longest record jump ever in Finland — didn't seem to mean much to the youngster, dubbed the Wunderkid of the World Cup circuit.

"I've jumped 130 metres in practice," said the slightly-built Collins, who stands a mere 5-foot-3 and weighs just over 100 pounds. He stands out in a crowd where the competitors are known for their muscular bodies.

Collins is the current world junior champion.

Howe family gets together to realize Gordie's dream

Times News Services

In the course of the game it was meaningless, but in the course of a lifetime it was a milestone.

Gordie Howe, three weeks shy of his 52nd birthday, fulfilled his dream of playing in the National Hockey League with his two sons Sunday in Boston.

With 12:21 gone in the second period of a lacklustre 1-1 tie between Hartford Whalers and Boston Bruins, Gordie and his sons, Marty and Mark, all were on the ice together for the first time in the NHL. And they all left together after an uneventful shift.

"What took so long?" Howe joked as he changed in an NHL dressing room for the first time with his boys. "I was wishing for it for eight years and then I finally got my chance."

The Howe trio played together for six seasons with Houston and New England of the World Hockey Association but, when the Whalers started their first NHL campaign, Gordie and Mark, 24, were on the team and Marty was in the minors.

Then Al Sims injured his back in a game Saturday with Washington. Hours later, Marty was called up from Springfield of the AHL to replace him.

Fulfilment of the dream was one step closer.

"This is kind of like the last chance," said Marty, 26. "I'm glad I had a chance to come back with 15 games left."

"It wasn't his playing ability that got him sent down," said the elder Howe. "They were trying to make a left wing out of him."

Marty and Mark were on defence during their shift with Gordie. "That was strictly by accident," said Whalers' coach Don Blackburn. "I'm going to do it in Detroit the first shift of the game Wednesday, all three on one line. It's significant to Gordie because he played there and his kids were born there. Then we'll go back to the way we play."

Sentiment didn't overshadow the desire to play well when Gordie found himself on the ice with the boys. His feeling was "go like hell and don't let them score."

But after the game, the sentiment and the meaning of the moment emerged.

"It's the only reason I'm playing," Howe said.

Meanwhile, Buffalo Sabres' prominence in the NHL this season has been attributed to balance — a strengthened defensive game to complement an already-potent offence.

As a reminder to future opponents that they haven't forgotten how to score goals, the Sabres set their shooters loose against St. Louis Blues Sunday and the result was a 9-4 rout.

The line of Rick Martin, Gil Perreault and Ric Seiling produced 13 points. Martin scored four goals — he now has 42 on the season — and added an assist, Perreault had five assists and Seiling a goal.

Elsewhere, Washington Capitals defeated New York Islanders 3-1, Atlanta Flames downed Winnipeg Jets 5-2, Quebec Nordiques shaded Toronto Maple Leafs 5-4, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Edmonton Oilers 5-3, New York Rangers trimmed Minnesota North Stars 4-2 and Detroit Red Wings whipped Pittsburgh Penguins 6-2.

Vancouver Canucks and Colorado Rockies skated to a 4-4 draw, the Canucks giving up a 3-0 lead.

Mike Gartner's 30th goal of the season insured the win and a weekend sweep for the rejuvenated Capitals, winners of 13 of their last 16 home games.

Australia beat New Zealand, 3-1, in the Eastern Zone final in Brisbane.

Phil Dent beat New Zealand's Chris Lewis, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 to clinch the tie for Australia. The final, meaningless singles between Australian John Alexander and New Zealand's Russell Simpson, was abandoned after Alexander had struggled to a 24-22 victory in the first set.

Thunderettes stop Killarney's wonder woman

British Columbia's three major universities — Victoria, Simon Fraser and UBC, not to mention some U.S. colleges — are going all out to woo Killarney's Cheryl Kelsey, but it probably wouldn't hurt their future basketball chances if they look more closely at Cowichan for scholarship candidates.

Cowichan's Thunderettes capped a brilliant season Saturday by defeating favored Killarney Cougars of Vancouver 61-53 in Vancouver to capture the British Columbia high school girls' championship.

Coached by John Lockwood, Cowichan completed its season with a sparkling 44-1, won-lost record. "A team team," said Mt. Douglas Ramblers' coach Earl Hockin of the new provincial champion.

It was Cowichan's depth and teamwork that offset another great effort by Kilarney's wonder woman. Kelsey scored 36 points to finish with 158 in four games for a record-shattering 39.5 average.

Lori Glomlein sparked Cowichan with 25 points in the final. Prince of Wales finished third and South Delta fourth. Port Alberni finished eighth and Mt. Douglas of Victoria ninth in one of the best-balanced tournaments in history. Only five of the 34 games finished with spreads of 10 or more points.

Victoria's balance was just too much for the Drakes. Jim Larson (18), Neil Cunningham (16), Bob Godfrey (14) and Wayne Russell (14) powered the attack for Western.

Race may move

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The 1981 Brazilian Grand Prix Formula One auto race probably will be moved from Sao Paulo to Rio de Janeiro, it has been announced.

Folk's big early margin difference in Brier win

CALGARY (CP) — It took him three tries, but Rick Folk has finally curled his way to the top in Canadian men's curling.

"It's no disgrace to be second, but it's sure nice to be on top for a change," Folk said Sunday after winning the Canadian championship and the right to represent Canada in the world championship later this month.

The 30-year-old real-estate salesman from Saskatoon, who placed second in each of the last two national championships, held off a comeback attempt by Al Hackner's rink from Northern Ontario to win 10-6 in the final playoff game.

When Folk heads to Moncton, N.B, for the world championship beginning March 24, he will be trying to capture a title that has eluded Canadian curlers since 1972, when it was won by the Orest Meleschuk rink from Winnipeg.

Folk was optimistic about his chances in the world championship and said Canadians have been unsuccessful in the past because they haven't been aggressive.

"Our chances are excellent," he said. "We're representing the best curlers in the world. We're going to be prepared and we'll be aggressive."

Hackner, skipping a Thunder Bay rink in his first Brier appearance, agreed. "I think he's going to win it. They were the best team here and they proved it out on the ice."

The 25-year-old Hackner, whose team-mates call him the Iceman for his coolness under pressure, faced an uphill battle all the way Sunday as Folk jumped ahead 6-0 with three points in each of the first two ends.

Hackner and his team of lead Bruce Kennedy, second Bob Nicol and third Rick Lang chipped away at the lead to trail 7-6 after eight ends, but Folk put it away in the ninth by drawing for three after an attempted draw by Hackner sailed through the house.

Folk's foursome includes newcomer Ron Mills at third and brothers Tom and Jim Wilson at second and lead respectively.

Folk finished the round-robin portion of the championship in first place with a 9-2 record to gain a bye into Sunday's final.

Hackner, with an 8-3 record, advanced to the final with a surprising 6-5 win over Alberta's Paul Gowsell in the semi-final.

Skip Wayne Hamilton of St. John's, whose Newfoundland rink ended with a 3-8 record in the round-robin, was chosen most sportsmanlike player.

The all-star team, selected by the Canadian Curling Reporters, included Folk, the Wilson brothers and third Neil Houston of Alberta.

Hackner and Lang earned spots on the second all-star team along with second Ray Giles of the Territories and lead Kelly Stearne of Alberta.

Next year's championship will be in Halifax and the following year's in Brandon, Man.

Canada takes opener

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — There were those who claimed Mert Thompsett and his rink from the Assiniboine Memorial Curling Club in Winnipeg had lost their vim, vigor and vitality when they dropped their provincial title this year.

But it all came together Sunday in Kitchener Auditorium when the Canadian champions came through with a 4-2 win over Scotland in the first round of the world junior curling championship.

In other first-round games in this 10-rink, round-robin event, the United States defeated France 7-5, Switzerland topped Italy 10-6, Denmark beat Norway 6-5 in two extra ends, and Sweden got past West Germany 5-3.

Harper rink loses opener in seniors

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Spectators clustered around the fourth sheet of ice at Riverside Country Club on Sunday night to watch the oldest — and many believe the best skip in the Canadian senior men's curling championship.

Dr. Wendell MacDonald, 71, of Prince Edward Island, did not let them down.

The three-time champion threw a spectacular last rock that knocked out two Quebec stones and stayed to count for an 8-7 come-from-behind win.

Earlier, MacDonald beat Manitoba 6-4 with the same kind of last-rock finesse.

The 2-0 win-loss record tied the Charlottetown rink with Terry McGeary of Saskatchewan and Mac White of Ontario for first place.

Duncan's Glen Harper, representing B.C., lost 10-3 to New Brunswick which is 1-0, the same as Northwest Territories, 10-9 winners over Northern Ontario. The Harper rink arrived late and appeared tired.

Ontario edged Alberta 9-8 and later downed Newfoundland 7-5.

Saskatchewan had an easier time, downing Nova Scotia 8-3 and Alberta 11-8.

Manitoba defeated Nova Scotia 9-8 and Quebec downed Newfoundland 10-6.

Shields sets five marks

ABBOTSFORD — Dave Shields set five provincial records while leading members of the Esquimalt Speedskating Club to an excellent showing in the British Columbia indoor championships at the weekend.

Shields set new marks in the 400, 800, 1,000, 2,500 and 3,000-metre events while capturing the senior men's title.

Gary Elander set a new record in the 300 metres en route to victory among bantam boys and Greg Thormoe claimed the juvenile boys' crown.

Three other Esquimalt "A" class skaters captured silver medals. Rod Phillips claimed his in the intermediate boys' category, Brenda Shields earned hers among the junior girls and Reggie Parsons was runner-up among the bantam boys.

In the "B" class, Sarah Klassen (bantam girls), Cal McGowan (bantam boys), Ricky Krupa (juvenile boys) and Stacy Blyth (junior girls) earned victories; Shawn Leckie (juvenile girls) placed second and Mike Vander Linden (junior boys) finished third.

The provincial meet served as a prelude to the Canadian championships March 22-23 in Moose Jaw, Sask., and the North American championships March 28-30 in Victoria's Memorial Arena.

Lacheur rink wins first two games

Times News Services

CHARLOTTETOWN — Nova Scotia defeated the Northwest Territories 11-0 Sunday to take first place after three rounds of the Canadian Junior Women's Curling championships here with three wins and no defeats.

British Columbia, represented by Oak Bay and skipped by Lana Lacheur, held second place on the strength of two wins and no losses and a third-round bye. Manitoba, Alberta, Ontario and Prince Edward Island shared the next rank with 2-1 records.

New Brunswick and the Northwest Territories had 1-2 records, and Newfoundland, Saskatchewan and Quebec were winless.

The Lacheur rink edged Saskatchewan 7-6 Sunday after opening with a 12-8 win over Manitoba Saturday.

In other second-round matches Sunday, P.E.I. defeated Alberta 7-6, Northwest Territories beat Quebec 11-5, Manitoba downed Ontario 10-7 and Nova Scotia trounced New Brunswick 10-3.

In the third round, Ontario beat Saskatchewan 7-2, Nova Scotia defeated the Northwest Territories 11-0, Alberta topped New Brunswick 8-3, P.E.I. downed Newfoundland 9-7, and Manitoba defeated Quebec 8-3.

In other games Saturday, New Brunswick defeated Quebec 10-6, Nova Scotia edged Prince Edward Island 8-7, Alberta beat Newfoundland 7-6, and Ontario defeated the Northwest Territories 7-3.

The round-robin bonspiel ends Thursday unless there is a tie which would force a playoff Friday.

Brohman fourth

EDMONTON — Brad Brohman of the University of Victoria finished fourth in the men's 800 metres final at the Canadian indoor track and field championships Saturday.

Johnny ends long slump

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Johnny Miller wrote an end to golf's most mysterious slump, firing a front-running, two-under-par 70 for a two-stroke victory Sunday in the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary golf tournament.

Miller, once golf's record-setting Golden Boy but a puzzled, struggling also-ran for four long years, claimed his first U.S. triumph since 1976. He finished with a 274 total, 14 shots under par on the 7,127-yard Inverrary Golf Club course.

But it wasn't easy.

He led all the way, starting with a two-shot advantage and building it to five at the turn. But his long unfamiliarity with the lead, the pressure of winning again after so long began to tell.

With Bruce Lietzke and veteran Charles Coody applying the pressure, Miller's lead began to dwindle.

When he bogeyed the 14th, it was down to a two-stroke margin. He missed from 2½ feet on the 15th. He missed a birdie from eight feet on the 16th.

But as the holes went by, his lead looked better. He made par on the 17th and finally got it home with a routine par on the final hole.

Only when his approach found the putting surface on the 18th hole did he relax. It was only then he knew he had it won. He shook hands with his caddy. And, walking to the green in the bright, warm south Florida sunshine, he was welcomed back to the ranks of the winners by a standing ovation.

"Johnny Miller playing well and winning again is a definite asset to the tour," said Lietzke.

"We're all glad to see him playing well again," said Coody, a former Masters champion.

They tied for second at 276, 12 under par. Coody shot a 67, Lietzke 66.

JoAnne older but smarter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — JoAnne Carner is one of the oldest regulars on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, but advancing age is not stopping her from showing the youngsters a thing or two.

Carner didn't become a professional until after she turned 30, but ranks fourth on the all-time LPGA money-winning list with earnings in excess of $700,000. And with her 41st birthday less than a month away, the veteran appears headed for her finest year.

A five-under-par 67 Sunday enabled Carner to capture the $18,750 first prize in a $125,000 tournament at Rancho Park. She has won $50,386 in 1980, by far the best on the tour, and has been a winner three times while playing in five of the year's six events.

Carner finished the rain-shortened 54-hole event with a score of 207. Second-round leader Kathy Postlewait and Debbie Massey tied for second place at 210 after rounds of 72 and 71 Sunday.

"You get smarter as you pass 40," Carner said with a smile after her 26th career victory. "I think my only goal is to become the oldest winner of a tournament."

Carner was short-circuited in 1979 by a dirt-bike mishap. She had won three tournaments before injuring both wrists in May, causing her to miss 18 events. But she still earned over $98,000 to rank ninth on the money-winning list.

Braves pad lead in playoff series

The favored Saanich Braves applied a stranglehold on the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League championship Sunday by defeating Oak Bay Trios 5-2 to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series.

Game No. 3 is scheduled for Tuesday night at Pearkes Arena.

Ian McLean sparked Braves' attack with three goals, including the game's first while his team was shorthanded. Don McKay and Marty Irvine added the singles for Saanich while Paul Hughes scored both goals for Oak Bay.

Standout in the game at Pearkes Arena was Oak Bay netminder Jay Longpre, who turned away 43 shots while Saanich's Marty Wakelyn stopped 27.

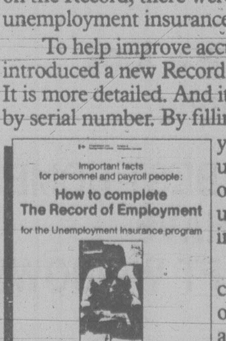
Help us control Unemployment Insurance costs.

Employers and personnel/payroll people – you can help us control unemployment insurance costs. How? By completing the Record of Employment form more accurately.

There are more than 650,000 employers in Canada. That's why even minor inaccuracies can add up to a lot. Last year, due to inaccuracies on the Record, there were over $100 million in unemployment insurance overpayments.

To help improve accuracy, we have introduced a new Record of Employment form. It is more detailed. And it is closely controlled by serial number. By filling it in accurately, you will help prevent underpayment or overpayment of unemployment insurance claims.

A guide, "How to complete the Record of Employment," is available to all employers. And we have instructed the people at Canada Employment Centres to pay special attention to your requests for information.



Important facts for personnel and payroll people:

You can help us by ensuring the Record of Employment is completed accurately. Please make certain your personnel/payroll people understand the importance of the Record of Employment. It is the most important form in Canada's unemployment insurance program. It's so important, in fact, that prompt and accurate completion of the Record of Employment is a legal requirement.

If all Canadian employers help in this effort, we can improve control of Canada's unemployment insurance program.

Four players earn university offers

Four Victoria players were offered scholarships by the University of British Columbia and Simon Fraser University after attending the two-day British Columbia Lions' football camp during the weekend.

Defensive back Russ Hafer, linebacker Jim Bateman and running back Tom Graham, all of Saanich Hornets, and lineman Jim Johnson of Victoria Dolphins were singled out for the honor out of the 70 Vancouver Island athletes attending the camp at Royal Athletic Park Saturday and Sunday.

The four will be joined by lineman Dennis Arter of Hornets, running back Scott Tuttle of Oak Bay Farmer Construction and defensive lineman Paul Constance of Dolphins at a six-day Lions' camp in Vancouver later this year.

Mestons spoilers; Wests keep lead

Meston's Auto Body played the role of a spoiler Sunday during first division action in the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

Meston's helped Victoria West remain in sole possession of first place by battling runner-up Victoria Athletics to a 1-1 deadlock at Heywood Avenue Park.

In other matches, Castaways recorded their first win of the season by edging Gorge 2-1 at Hampton Park and Powell River Villa nipped Oak Bay 1-0 at Topaz Park.

Wests had taken over the lead by defeating Nanaimo United 2-1 Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Mark Robb gave Athletics an early lead by blasting in a 25-yard direct free kick at 10 minutes but Tiberio Frias equallized for Meston's at 59 minutes, flicking the ball over the diving goalkeeper after collecting a goalmouth pass from Carlos Almedia.

Athletics pressed throughout the match but Meston's managed to hold on behind a stout defence led by Howie Anderson, Oscar Pohl and goalie Gordie Reading.

Grant Darley, the A's goalie, also came up with some good saves, including one on a breakaway by Graham Tolson.

Ziggy Karl opened scoring for Castaways at 31 minutes with a header off an indirect free kick and Steve Bowers made it 2-0 at 35 minutes. Howie Kirk replied for Gorge at the 62-minute mark.

Duncan McDougall scored early in the first half to give Powell River the victory.

Rob Williams led the Wests with two goals at 20 and 27 minutes and Dan Henry boosted the margin further at 39 minutes. Don Attig (54 minutes) and Mike Hughes (84) replied for Nanaimo.

The results left the well-balanced division with only nine points separating the top nine teams. In addition to the battle for the league title, there is also a tight fight shaping up to avoid relegation to the second division. Five teams are within two points of ninth place and the final relegation spot.

In the lone Jackson Cup match of the weekend, Clarence Austin scored two goals and Wayne Markland added a single to give Nanaimo City a 3-0 win over Oak Bay Alumni and a berth in the quarter-finals next weekend.

Both sides are from the second division.

Ballendine wins award

LUMMI, Wash. — Cliff Ballendine of Victoria was named "Buckskin Boy" in the annual Lummi Buckskin boxing tournament Saturday after knocking out a heavier and more experienced opponent.

Ballendine, a 14-year-old who weighs 119 pounds, KO'd a 21-year-old, 125-pounder in the third round of his final.

In earlier bouts, he scored a knockout and a technical knockout.

Comeback-bound Ali tripped by his lip

Times News Services

Muhammad Ali, who has his eyes on a fourth heavyweight boxing championship, has been tripped by his lip after launching his announced comeback.

Dr. Tom Baker, a plastic surgeon in Miami, put 10 stitches in Ali's upper lip Saturday to close a one-inch wound and recommended the three-time heavyweight champion not spar for four weeks.

Ali, 38, trying to arrange a big-money title shot against John Tate, World Boxing Association champion, left his Deer Lake, Pa., training camp Friday to go to Miami to campaign for President Carter.

He broke away from the campaign trail to go to the Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach, where he sparred three rounds with Luis Acosta and five rounds with Jeff Sims. During the final round with Sims, Ali, not wearing a mouthpiece, got the lip cut.

The cut went "into the muscle but it wasn't really a deep cut," said Baker, adding, "Ali's right eye and right cheek were swollen. He looked like he had been in a good fight."

Ali, whose last fight before retirement was his title-regaining win over Leon Spinks on Sept. 15, 1978, was not available for comment. A telephone call to Deer Lake on Sunday broughtg word that he was due back Tuesday.

The wound won't keep Ali from running, shadowing boxing, skipping rope and exercising to get in physical shape, but it was not known how it would affect his timetable for a Tate fight, planned for late June.

While Ali was making waves with his sparring injury, other heavyweights were making ripples in real fights.

Two old Ali adversaries, Spinks and Earnie Shavers, had their troubles.

Spinks, fighting for only the second time since losing to Ali, was fortunate to escape with a 10-round draw against Eddie (Animal) Lopez in Las Vegas on Saturday. The draw came about when referee Mills Lane ruled Lopez intentionally butted Spinks in the fifth round and instructed the three judges to deduct a point from Lopez.

Shavers, 35, who underwent surgery in November for a torn left retina suffered in a title loss to Holmes last September, knocked down Bernardo Mercado of Colombia in the third round but then was stopped in the seventh by Mercado's punches and apparent exhaustion at the Playboy Resort in Great Gorge, N.J.

Sunday, Scott LeDoux rebounded from a loss to Mike Weaver by scoring a unanimous 10-round decision over Marty Monroe.

In Atlantic City, N.J., Curtis Parker of Philadelphia knocked out veteran David Love in the ninth round to win the U.S. Boxing Association middleweight title

"He's identical to me," former heavyweight champ Joe Frazier said of Parker. "He's tough on the body. But I'd like to see him double up on that short left jab. Bam. Bam. Bam."

Saturday night in Johannesburg, South African Jimmy Abbott knocked out one-time title-contender Kallie Knoetze in the first round.

Davis heads for Toronto swim event

Stan Davis of the Victoria Olympians, accompanied by coach Mark Felner, today headed for the Canadian short-course swimming championships, starting March 14 in Toronto.

Davis, one of the top swimmers in British Columbia, won the 100-metre freestyle race, finished second in the 50 and third in the 300 during the recent British Columbia winter short-course championships at the Crystal Pool.

Paula gains weight for a fat part scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There are no sweeter words to an actress than a producer's orders to "gain weight" — which is what Joe Wambaugh told Paula Prentiss to do if she expected to star in his new movie, The Black Marble.

Paula is constitutionally skinny.

The dark-haired, brown-eyed charmer from Houston, Texas, is 5-foot-10. She normally weighs 115 pounds, thanks to a metabolism which allows her to eat as she pleases. She never diets.

Not that Paula eats like a stevedore. Unlike most of us, including movie stars, she has a sparrow-like appetite.

When Paula tested for the role of the woman cop in Wambaugh's movie version of his best-selling novel, she didn't even see the testy writer-producer.

Her reading for director Harold Becker was taped. Wambaugh liked what he heard and Paula sent along a film clip from one of her TV movies. Word came back that she was much too gaunt and wan to play a lady cop.

Paula, whose career has been on the wane for the past decade, told Becker she would be willing to gain whatever weight necessary to win the role. She had read the script and was determined to play Natalie Zimmerman opposite Robert Foxworth who had already been signed and with whom she tested.

Paula had given birth to her daughter, Prentiss, only 10 months earlier, and weighed precisely 115 pounds.

"I just wasn't in the habit of eating much," Paula said.

The actress was perched prettily on a couch in her Beverly Hills home. Prentiss, 18-months-old and still in diapers, scampered in and out of the living room, sometimes pursued by her brother Ross, 5.

Paula's husband, actor Richard Benjamin — who is taller and thinner than his wife — strolled in from time to time to discuss a garlicky dinner he was preparing in the kitchen.

Undistracted by all the activity, Paula continued her narrative. "It took me about two weeks to gain 17 pounds. I ate a lot of red meat, bread and butter and pasta. I'm Italian, so I enjoyed the pasta. But I didn't eat sweets. I don't like them.

"After I gained the weight, I really felt good. I did a screen test for Wambaugh to see if I'd put on enough poundage. Joe saw the test and sent me a letter saying I was Natalie."

There was a note of triumph in Paula's words. And well there might be.

The Black Marble is the best work she has done in movies and the first major leading lady role she has played since Man's Favorite Sport with Rock Hudson 15 years ago. That picture bombed.

In the intervening years Paula appeared in so-so feature films and TV movies in secondary roles, among them, The Stepford Wives, Move, Catch 22 and What's New Pussycat?

She and husband Dick costarred in the unsuccessful TV sitcom He and She.

"After so many years of playing second and third leads the transition to leading lady was difficult to make. The role of Natalie in The Black Marble is the most complex I've ever played. I think it represents my best work.

"I got to segue from character actress to a romantic leading lady in the film. It was a proper progression for me.

"I'm an unusual looking and behaving person. My screen persona is essentially entertaining. However, I'm not easily categorized. People respond to my voice first and then my height. But my screen image really never come together until now."

Paula wondered aloud if perhaps taking time out to have children was a factor in the change in her career and how she perceives herself.

She said, "I wasn't happy in my career for more than five years. But then I wasn't looking for anything special because I was concentrating on my children. I wanted to do things right. Being a parent took precedence over my career.

"Motherhood has helped me play Natalie. She's a hard-boiled realistic woman — a big change from the coltish roles I'd played for so long.

"Being an actress and a mother, weaving my professional and personal life together is carrying me along. I learned the hard way that I was too much into analysis and introspection before the children arrived.

"Dick and I waited 13 years to have youngsters. Today I make an individual effort and also have these unpredictable little people to deal with.

"I'm 42 years old now. I'm an altogether different person than when I started. I became a movie star at MGM in Where The Boys Are and that held me for 20 years while I figured out my life.

"I'd never wanted to play a character like Natalie before. She starts out hard and cynical and dispirited. I'd always played light-hearted women. But as an actress I become whatever's necessary in a role.

"This picture and this part frames me. Natalie is an up-to-date woman, the most life-like, full character I've ever played.

"If The Black Marble does well then I will have a career."

Mary didn't know she was pregnant

Basketball star a bonus baby

BELLE GLADE, Fla. (AP) — Star forward Mary West had put on a little weight and didn't play as well as expected when her high school girls' basketball team won its sectional championship.

Thirty-one hours later, she gave birth to a daughter.

"I felt just a little overweight," said the 16-year-old junior at Glades Central High School, adding she didn't know she was pregnant.

The 6-foot-1 star, nicknamed The Tree, was given a clean bill of health by a school nurse four weeks ago, says Graham Frost, the school's athletic director.

Frost said he sent her to the school clinic because she was putting on weight. "I said, 'Mary, you're putting on too much weight. I'd like to have you go to a doctor and have it checked out.'"

Mary scored only four points — six less than her season average — in the March 1 game, and Frost said her play was off.

The next day, Ms. West gave birth at home to 6-pound, 2-ounce Cassandra Olympia West.

There's no oil for Northern Tier?

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall says the proposed Northern Tier pipeline to carry Alaskan crude oil from Port Angeles, Wash. to Clearbrook, Minn. is whacky, misconceived and unnecessary because there is no oil to pump into it.

Production at the Prudhoe Bay oil field on Alaska's North Slope will begin to decline in a few years, and there have been no significant discoveries in Alaska to make up the difference, Udall said during a visit to Washington state to campaign for Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"I came thinking the main objections to this thing were environmental," he said. "But I found out the real reasons for objecting to it are economic.

Kennedy is also opposed to the pipeline, but his rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, President Jimmy Carter, has endorsed it.

Udall believes the present interior secretary, Cecil Andrus, recommended Carter endorse the pipeline "against his better judgment."

Nationalists win in Basque election

BILBAO, Spain (UPI) — The conservative Basque Nationalist Party claimed victory today in elections for a Basque parliament and called for peace talks with separatist ETA guerrillas.

The results of Sunday's election, in which almost one in two Basques abstained, dealt a stunning blow to Madrid-based parties, particularly that of Premier Adolfo Suarez.

Overall, nationalist parties dominated the Basque country's first-ever home rule parliament election, winning 42 seats compared to 18 for the Madrid-based parties in the 60-seat assembly.

The Basque Nationalists would enjoy an overall majority if the radical Herri Batasuna coalition, which won 11 seats for the second largest single block, kept its word to boycott the parliament, dropping the number of seats to 49.

Carlos Garaicoechea, Basque Nationalist leader, denied he had already made contact with the ETA, but indicated he would lose no time in doing so.

An election campaign truce by ETA suggested the guerrillas might agree to peace talks with Basque politicians but not necessarily with the Basque Nationalists alone.

Toy pistol in hijacking

BEIRUT (AP) — A young Lebanese armed with a toy pistol hijacked a Lebanese airliner today to focus attention on a missing religious leader. He surrendered after the plane landed at Beirut, its destination.

The 65 other passengers and crew members aboard the Middle East Airlines Boeing 707 jet were unharmed, an airport spokesman reported.

The hijacker was a member of the Shiite Moslem sect in Lebanon. He told reporters he staged the skyjack to "revive interest in the fate of Imam Musa Sadr," the spiritual leader of Lebanon's one million Shiites, who disappear during a trip to Libya 18 months ago.

Can halt baldness Finnish scientists say

LONDON — Two Finnish scientists said they have developed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on [illegible] the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The claim, however, was greeted with initial reservation by some medical experts.

The product contains a synthetic [illegible] which clears away dead hairs and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

Bogota rules out force

BOGOTA (UPI) — Colombia has ruled out the use of force to free 20 foreign diplomats, including the U.S. ambassador, despite an impasse in negotiations with leftist guerrillas holding the captives at the Dominican Embassy.

As the siege worn on, a new round of talks to break the 13-day stalemate were expected to begin by mid-afternoon today. Three negotiating sessions between the government and the leftists have been fruitless.

"The Colombian government has given its word of honor that there will not be the slightest provocation against the embassy as long as there is no attempt against the lives of the hostages," Interior Minister German Zea said Sunday.

His assurance was prompted by a report by an European news agency that army troops were preparing to attack the captured embassy.

The deadlock between the left-wing April 19 Movement guerrillas and the government was unchanged Sunday during the national, off-year municipal and state assembly elections that could gauge public feeling about the capture of the embassy and the diplomats.

Results of the voting for 8,720 city council seats and 467 state and territorial assembly posts were to be announced later today.

Zea said the elections had been held "in an atmosphere of complete calm," and "we have shown the world that we are ready to reject terrorism and reaffirm the democratic spirit that reigns in Colombia."

The guerrillas, using the captured diplomats to convey their sentiments, let the government know at the end of talks Friday that the negotiations up to now were considered a "total failure" and warned a "crisis" could worsen the situation.

The main demands of the movement, also known as M-19, are the liberation of 311 jailed leftists and payment of a $50 million ransom. They warned that no other hostages would be let go until the demands were met.

Prince Philip in Olympic dilemma

LONDON (UPI) — The royal family's love of horses may prove an embarrassment to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Mrs. Thatcher has made it clear she wants Britons to support the boycott of the Moscow Olympics, but Prince Philip is supposed to attend the games in his capacity as president of the International Equestrian Federation.

Philip now is looking for any excuse to keep away from the games although he is critical of mixing politics and sport, a London newspaper reported Sunday.

The Sunday Express gossip columnist, Lady Olga Maitland, said Queen Elizabeth's husband told her this week of the "enormous dilemma" facing him.

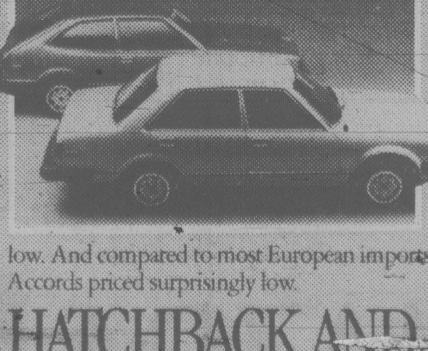
EVERY IMPRESSION SAYS THEY SHOULD COST MORE.



The styling is tight and concise. And everything fits into place. That's the immediate thing you notice when you first see an Accord Hatchback or Sedan. And upon closer inspection that impression grows. The finish is refined. The detailing is impeccable. These are no run-of-the-mill imports, or mass-produced domestics, these are finely crafted automobiles in the truest sense of the word. That's your first impression, and that impression says they should cost more.

Inside, the impression continues. The detailing and finishing inside are as impeccable as they are outside. The fully reclining bucket seats are contoured and comfortable. There's a remote control to open the trunk or hatchback. The Sedan has a remote control to operate the rear door locks. There's even a coin box on the dash for parking change. From the driver's point of view, they're driver's cars. With everything falling immediately to hand. And to eye, with a tachometer, speedometer and the other necessary lights and gauges to tell you what's happening, when.

From the passenger's point of view, they're passenger cars. With cloth faced seats for winter warmth. A heating and ventilation system that distributes warm or cool air evenly throughout the car. And a standard AM/FM sound system.

Once again, those impressions say the cars should cost more. Next comes the 'raison d'etre', driving an Accord. The 5-speed transmission (or the optional Hondamatic with overdrive), the 1.6 litre OHC engine, the front wheel drive, the rack and pinion steering and the fully independent suspension all add up to a driving experience that has to be experienced.

These are the impressions that you get from an Accord Hatchback or Sedan. But they could lead you to a false conclusion, that the cars cost more than they actually do. If you compare an Accord to an equally equipped domestic you'll find it's priced quite low. And compared to most European imports, you'll find the Accords priced surprisingly low.

Connally quits in wake of Reagan primary victory

Times News Services

Fourteen months, $10 million and one delegate after entering the race for the Republican nomination for U.S. president, John Connally is out of the contest.

He quit Sunday, a day after losing badly to Ronald Reagan in South Carolina, and two days before primaries in Georgia, Alabama and Florida — all states where Reagan is heavily favored.

Connally called Reagan "still the champion."

With Connally out, former president Gerald Ford is sure to feel new pressure to challenge Reagan, whom Ford considers too conservative to win the White House. Ford has said there is a 50-50 chance he will step in to try to deny Reagan the nomination.

An ABC-Harris poll released Sunday showed Ford would defeat Reagan in a contest for the Republican nomination and, unlike Reagan, would beat President Carter in November.

According to the poll, Republican and independent voters sampled nationwide prefer Ford over Reagan by 33 percent to 27 percent.

Rep. John Anderson would get 15 percent, George Bush 14 percent, and other candidates 7 percent, according to the poll completed Saturday night.

If the general election were held now, the poll said, a sampling including Republicans, Democrats and independents gave Ford 54 percent to Carter's 44 percent with 2 percent undecided.

But Connally, who entered as Reagan's major conservative challenger, said he thinks Reagan might wrest the presidency from Jimmy Carter, who is seeking a second term, because, "Carter's popularity is a fantasy."

Forceps left in for five years

SEATTLE (AP) — When Elaine Mezich developed a sharp, cutting pain in her abdomen, she was rushed to Cabrini Hospital for emergency treatment.

X-rays were taken, but all physicians could see was a 6-inch pair of forceps.

"They thought she must have been lying on a medical instrument while on the x-ray table," said Cindy Hoblet, Mrs. Mezich's niece.

But after another check, doctors concluded the surgical instrument had been inside the 57-year-old woman since an operation five years earlier.

On Friday, surgeons operated on Mrs. Mezich for four hours. They removed the forceps and a bowel obstruction.

The surgeon who performed the earlier operation no longer is alive.

Mrs. Mezich never felt the instrument and just had a little constipation.

The first time she felt the forceps was when the instrument recently moved into her large intestine.

Human worth jumps 643%

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Double-digit inflation has driven the value of the human body up a whopping 643 percent in the last 10 years — but we're still a bargain.

The human body's minerals and trace elements, worth only 98 cents in 1970, now are worth $7.28, said Harry Monsen, professor of anatomy at the University of Illinois.

Despite the dramatic increase, we still come pretty cheap.

The average 150-pound body is worth less than a nickel a pound — a humbling thought considering the price of other perishables.

Calcium is the most prevalent mineral in the body, the average person containing about 5 pounds of it.

Other minerals and elements of some market value are 1½ pounds of phosphate, 9 ounces of potassium, 6 ounces of both sodium and sulfur, an ounce of manganese, and less than 1 ounce each of iodine, iron and copper.

Monsen also said we're all full of hot air.

Oxygen accounts of 65 percent of the body's weight. Carbon accounts of 18 percent, hydrogen 10 percent, and nitrogen 3 percent of the body's weight.

Nkomo serves in Mugabe cabinet

SALISBURY (UPI) — Veteran guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo will serve as home affairs minister in the government being formed by Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, his former spokesman, Mugabe's party announced today.

Sources close to the talks said the home affairs ministry, which handles rural administration, would be expanded to include police affairs as part of the Mugabe-Nkomo bargain.

The sources said Mugabe had offered Nkomo the largely ceremonial post of president but that he turned it down.

Mugabe spokesman Eddison Zvobgo made the announcement after a long meeting between Mugabe and Nkomo and senior aides.

Mugabe served as Nkomo's publicity secretary in the early sixties, before the black nationalist movement split.

In 1976 the two men formed an alliance to speed up the struggle against white minority rule. They split again to run separately in the recent independence election but Mugabe, despite his landslide victory, asked Nkomo to join him in a coalition government.

Zvobgo declined to say how many posts Nkomo's party would have in the new cabinet, which is to be announced Tuesday.

The spokesman said two prominent members of the white community have been asked to serve in the government and that talks with them are continuing. He would not disclose their names or the posts they are to hold.

He also declined to say whether they were members of minority leader Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front Party, which holds all the 20 seats reserved for whites in the new 100-member Parliament.

Mugabe announced during the weekend he would take over the defense portfolio in the new government.

The guerrilla leader emerged from the recent election with 57 of the 80 contested black seats. Nkomo captured 20 seats and former black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa won three.

In his weekend statements, Mugabe again moved to mute the radical Marxist image that has caused whites to fear him.

He reiterated a desire to create a state of "good neighborliness" with white-ruled South Afirca, asserting there would be no interruption of existing trade links.

The black leader said his government would oppose South Africa's racially discriminatory system of apartheid morally and diplomatically, but not militarily. He said Rhodesia, soon to be re-named Zimbabwe, would not grant bases to guerrillas seeking to topple the South African white minority regime.

Thatcher butt of labor protest

LONDON (AP) — Tens of thousands of union members from all over Britain thronged the streets of London on Sunday in a demonstration against Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government.

Organizers claimed 140,000 persons marched, and said it was the biggest rally anywhere in Britain this century. Scotland Yard said police along the route estimated the number at 30,000.

A union spokesman, asked about the huge discrepancy, said police based their figure on an estimate that Trafalgar Square can hold about 40,000 persons. "But we say the square was as full as it ever got . . . and as some people left others arrived to take their place."

Sixteen special trains and more than 300 buses brought demonstrators to the capital from all over Britain. They gathered in Hyde Park, then marched about three kilometres to Trafalgar Square behind 10 bands and fluttering union banners. The last marchers were still leaving the park four hours after the head of the column reached the square.

They carried placards denouncing proposed government spending cuts and laws aimed at curbing union power, including compulsory secret ballots by workers before strikes are called.

Len Murray, general secretary of the 12 million-member Trades Union Congress headed the march with leaders of the 10-week strike against the state-run British Steel Corp.

Meanwhile, British Steel Corp. officials said 67.6 per cent of the strikers have voted in favor of accepting the company's 14.4-per-cent-pay increase offer. The unions have demanded a 20-per-cent raise and opposed voting on the company offer.

Wife for sale

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Poverty forced a villager in India's central Madhya Pradesh state to sell his 22-year-old wife and small child to an old man for $620, police said. The sale came to light when the woman's brother complained to police.

Earl Mountbatten of Burma, the Second World War hero assassinated in Ireland last year, left $5,009,043 in his will. Inheritance details were kept secret at the request of the Queen, a cousin of the earl, in accordance with the practice of not publishing details of wills involving members and relatives of royalty.

Steve Chadderdon of Casper wasn't worried when his utility bill was higher than usual. He figured no one would believe he owed Northern Utilities $2.1 million. And he was right. After Chadderdon saw the bill for heating his modest house in this Wyoming community, he called the utility company and said, "I have a problem. . ." The woman who answered the phone for the company admitted perhaps something went wrong with the company computer and that it appeared he only owed $56.92.

Manilow

Aching hand maybe, but she managed to heave the phone to her ear. Lori Scussel wrote "You are my singer and my song, Barry Manilow" 10,000 times to attract her idol's attention. And it worked. Manilow called the 15-year-old Vallejo, Calif., high school student on the telephone. "You could have sent a card," Manilow said. But he admitted he was flattered. "How's your hand," he asked. Said an exultant Lori: "It's better, thank you."

So who minds standing in line? Security specialist Dean Dersa discovered when you asked the Bank of America's robot "Versateller" for cash in a certain way, it became "a money tree." But the San Jose, Calif. bank didn't believe him and at first refused to take back $400 he said the robot slipped him. Officials finally admitted their automated employee might have its wires crossed, but thought no one else would notice the quirk. They were wrong. Banker John Keane says several mysterious withdrawals later, the generous gizmo was reprogrammed.

A Gloucester, England man might have foregone a safe-robbing caper had he known it would take all night. Dawn was breaking when 28-year-old David Barber broke through the steel-reinforced vault to discover the thing had been unlocked all along. And empty. A weary Barber fled by joining a group of joggers. One of them was a policeman.

Dear Abby:

Phil is 28 and I'm 22. We met at church choir about a year ago and have been going together ever since. He's asked me to marry him, but there is something about him that bothers me. Please don't laugh; he's just so cheap.

He won't leave a tip unless the service was exceptional — which rarely happens.

Once when he took me out for dinner I said I wasn't very hungry, so he ordered a big meal for himself and told the waiter I didn't want anything. He ate in front of me and didn't even offer me a cup of coffee! I felt so hurt I nearly cried.

He's always asking me to take my car and never offers to put in any gas — and I pay parking, too.

We both work, and he doesn't have anybody to support but himself, so I can't understand why he's so tight.

I know it's the thought that counts, but every gift he's given me has been so cheap that I'm almost ashamed to show it to anybody.

Other than his tightness with money, we have a good relationship. How important is a person's attitude about money?

Puzzled

Dear Puzzled:

Very. Don't treat it lightly. A person who is stingy, uncharitable and generally tight with his money is usually inconsiderate, ungracious and uncharitable in other areas. You are wise to wonder.

Dear Abby:

I'm over 80, and have a difficult decision to make. About 55 years ago, my youngest brother (then 23) married a pretty girl who said she was expecting his child. At the time there was talk in town that she was romantically involved with a married man — her employer.

Unfortunately, her child turned out to be the living image of her employer! When the boy was 4, his parents divorced, and the mother and son left town. To the day of my brother's death (three years ago), he never mentioned her or his "son." My brother never married again.

Last year, a handsome, well-mannered man knocked on our door and introduced himself as my brother's son. He said his mother had died recently, and he wanted to visit the town of his birth and meet his "father's" family. He was full of questions about his "father", saying his mother refused to talk about him. He asked me why his parents had divorced. (His biological father is also dead.)

My question: should he be told?

Wondering

Dear Wondering:

I would leave well enough alone, and say nothing. I'll probably hear an uproar from many who believe it's everyone's "right" to know their real roots, but I would not exhume this 55-year-old skeleton.

arthur mayse

Soon now, the black brant returning!

Some day soon, one or other of us is going to look out from the home beach and see, insubstantial as smoke an Old Ocean's horizon line, a dark, fast-moving skein. It will trace a course low over the wavetops .... birds in disciplined formation, buckled down to a long-haul flight.

If I'm lucky enough to spot them first, I will wait until I can be sure of the sighting, then make my pronouncement: "Black brant! They've come back."

The return of the brant on their migration from the marshes of Central America to the McKenzie Delta in the Arctic is one of our signs of spring. The handsome little black geese like these hospitable beaches with their rich pasturage of sea lettuce and eel grass. Any day from now until late May or early June, we are likely to see a klatch of anywhere from half a dozen to several hundred brant afloat in the shallows or feeding along the water's edge.

Then, as if in obedience to a directive, they will marshal themselves into travelling flights once more, and push on for the Arctic with summer at their tails.

There are other harbingers of spring. They have been coming our way for several weeks now, and we rejoice in the changing season.

It starts in an unobtrusive way while February is still on the land. We'll be out walking, convinced that winter lasts forever, when we see fresh green in a ditch-bottom.

Next time by, the grass will be poking its blade-tips above water: indubitable new growth, and a sure sign that the winter is over and gone.

We will also become aware that the ozier boughs and slim shoots are glowing red in the marshes, and go looking for that other showy visitant, the pussywillow.

There's nothing bashful about the pussywillow. Even at a hundred yards, the eye picks out its silvery nubbins arranged so neatly in alternate formation on the black branch.

One of our household rites, conducted in the hiatus between winter's end and spring's beginning, is to throw out the orange Chinese lanterns which have stood since late fall in a bowl on our living-room coffee table. We replace them with pussywillows, gathered at the cost of wet feet along the edge of a swamp which will soon be jumping with spring music of nights.

This is the singing of the frogs. It comes and goes on the breeze, drowned out sometimes by highway traffic but always returning, to give the springtime its theme song.

In line with clan custom, we salute the first morning of each month by saying the word, 'Swan!' loud and clear. It's an observance old as the hills, its purpose to guarantee good luck for the month to come.

On the First of March, we put a little extra emphasis into our 'Swans!'

We have made it through the dark of the year — from November clear through February. It's been a long grind. But the earth has given itself a waking shrug, and is turning again toward the light. We emerge pale as potato sprouts, last summer's deep-burned tan faded quite away through the weeks of sunless indoor days.

But never mind! Today, we could feel sunheat through out car window-glass. We turned off the heater, another triumph over winter departed. Soon enough comes the first dandelion and the first sunburn.

Always, I intend to winter-spade our garden, so that it will welcome the spring with neat, well-aerated furrows. And always, when March comes, our garden patch lies unspaded and weedy, with last year's tomato sticks staggering drunkenly in their row, and one of the posts that held the pea netting half-collapsed.

Winter induces softness. It never fails to shock me, when I have collected rusty spade, rake and wheelbarrow, how little effort sets me puffing.

For the first gardening bout of the season, half an hour is plentifully long. Soon that will change: I look forward to entire afternoons in the sun and the wind, coaxing new growth out of our stony soil.

But no sooner do I contemplate honest labor than another thought intrudes. Now that March is here, it's time to investigate a certain brown-water creek that slips secretively out of the woods up the line.

Spring also spells trout .... and it will soon be time to get out new fishing licenses!

'You've really got to love the sea'

SAND HEADS, B.C. (CP) — The box-shaped building perched on stilts seven miles off shore in the middle of the Gulf of Georgia looks like the butt of a joke about unfinished government projects.

But to ocean-going freighters and pleasure craft, the Sand Heads lighthouse — one of the few in Canada still manned full-time — is a navigational aid that can mean life or death on the notoriously quirky waters of the gulf.

Just six metres below the surface at low tide, lie treacherous shoals which in their day claimed scores of ships trying to navigate the lower reaches of the Fraser River.

The lighthouse, which in 1958 replaced a succession of light ships which had guarded the spot since the mid-1860s, stands where the main arm of the Fraser meets with the shallows of the Roberts and Sturgeon Banks.

For 16-day stetches in the rough seas of winter and treacherous tides of summer, the Canadian Coast Guard outpost is home to light keeper Doug Smith and his shiftmate Bob Wallace.

Two other lightkeepers spell the pair off for 16 days and then it's back to Sand Heads.

—CP laserphoto

Smith, on deck, gives Wallace a hand as two change shift at Sand Heads station

Their breed is quickly disappearing with the federal government's program to replace men with automatic electronic equipment at lighthouses and stations along thousands of kilometres of coastline.

"You really have to love the sea," says Wallace, gazing from his comfortable lighthouse kitchen at the crab boats dotting Sturgeon Bank.

Smith recalls the days the pair had to wait for storms to blow over before risking the 11-kilometre trip back to Steveston in their four metre dinghy.

Smith has been a lighthouse keeper for 11 years, seven at Sand Heads and four at lonely Langara Island in the Queen Charlotte Islands off the B.C. coast.

Wallace, 52, landed the job after visiting a Canada Manpower office in Victoria three years ago. Like Smith, he got his sea legs in the navy and since both are bachelors, they have no family to miss.

Their job entails sending 10 weather reports to the coast guard office each day. They also broadcast sychronized and coded international time signals so mariners can get their bearings for passage up the Fraser.

They scan the horizon for vessels in distress — about 60 run into problems annually — and call on the coast guard hovercraft for help when it's needed.

The lighthouse is comfortable enough. The kitchen and living room share the first floor with heavy machinery such as diesel generators, a fog detector, and winches. The second floor holds two bunk rooms and the radio room.

"It's a lonely job, all right," says Wallace.

"Doug and I probably see each other for three hours a day, because we spell each other, 12 hours each. At noon we play cards, watch television or something.".

But there's company in the herds of giant Stellar's sea lions and other marine life that comes to call.

In summer, the boulders of the 10-kilometre jetty that is the station's only link with land are a favored way station for as many as 40 sea lions.

"They keep you awake all night, fighting and barking," says Wallace. "It's really comical."

"Yeah, we had them up in the Charlottes, too," adds Smith. "Only there, if the wind was right, you couldn't go outside. They stink, you know."

Harbor seals and fur seals sometimes take a breather from chasing fish up the river to bask on the rocks. Night time has its own special quality.

"It's a little eerie, with the birds I mean," says Wallace. "Hundreds of them. They come for the light from our windows, to see the way."

The two men, who work 12-hour shifts, see each other for three hours a day, when they will play cards or watch their television which gets fine reception from all area stations with only a pair of rabbit ears.

To pass his time alone, Wallace keeps a book of pictures and observations on the bird life that drops in. Surf scooters, mergansers, buffleheads and cormorants, heros, cranes auklets and murrelets are a few of the species common at any time of year.

Much of the men's work is automated now. A videoscope strobelight monitors fog conditions. It shoots a beam into the sky; if will be reflected back if fog has set in.

If the fog is within about three kilometres, the strobe shoots out again to ensure it is not just a passing bank of mist. If the fog has not dispersed after eight minutes, the videoscope automatically activates a bellowing foghorn.

Even with all the modern technology the two men still stand in awe of the power of the weather and tides.

"When it comes down to it, you've got to accept it," says Wallace. "You've got to learn to enjoy it."

Bone marrow does lots of hard work

By DR. BOB YOUNG

When you ask someone to get down on their marrow bones, you are suggesting that they kneel — a good natured way of telling a person that they had better beg pardon. My grandmother, after scrubbing the kitchen floor, would say that she had spent the morning on her marrow bones — her term for hard work.

Bone marrow, of course, is the soft, rather fatty material that is present in the centre of the long bones of the body. Its main function is the production of blood cells, and failure of the marrow to do this can lead to serious and even fatal illness. Along with being the source of red cells, the marrow is also involved in the production of white cells and platelets. Marrow failure means that production of any or all of these cells is reduced or stopped.

Anemia, which may be profound, bleeding tendencies, and susceptibility to infection may result. This anemia is called aplastic anemia, as it is due to the failure of cells to be formed. (Other anemias are due to destruction of cells in the body, or loss of blood due to hemorrhage.)

In about half of the cases that cause of marrow failure is not known. Unfortunately most of these cases occur in teenagers and young adults.

Other causes of marrow failure include radiation (cancer treatment), exposure to chemicals and drugs, and infection. Sometimes the marrow is destroyed by the overgrowth of other tissue. Leukemia and other cancer cells may strangle and destroy normal marrow cells.

The bone marrow is readily accessible for biopsy and this procedure is often used when examination of the peripheral blood leaves questions unanswered. Usually the extent of marrow damage can be determined, and the reason may also be discovered.

Treatment depends upon the cause of the condition. If the marrow has been damaged but not destroyed by a drug or infection, the patient can be kept alive with transfusions in the hope that the marrow may recover. In primary marrow failure, where the cause is not known, and in leukemia or other cancer cases the outlook may be grave. Transfusions cannot be given indefinitely, and the bleeding, infection and anemia are very difficult to treat over a long term.

Dr. Young welcomes letters from Times readers. Personal replies, however, are not possible — and only topics of broadest general interest will be referred to. Write c/o Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8V 1E5.

Dahlia quilt a challenge

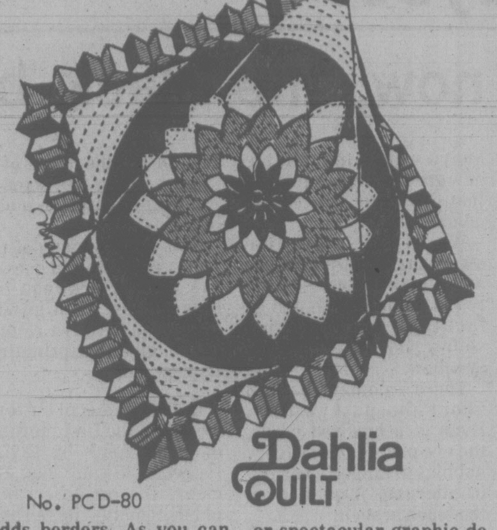
kathy faryon's patchwork & quilting

By KAY FARYON

Last January, 1979, at a show of quilts in St. Paul, Minnesota, a large Dahlia quilt in lovely shades of browns, won a ribbon. Some of us there were waiting patiently to get some free space so we could photograph it properly. It reminded us of dood ling with a compass when we first took geometry. Since the diameter of the circle is so large (over 2 or 3 m), one wonders how to draft a pattern for making one. In its simplicity and elegance, it is similar to the Lone Star or Star of Bethlehem. When one opens up this kind of quilt to show it to people, everyone says "Oh-h-h look at that!"

In Houston this year, when I spoke with Pat Cox at her booth, filled with "One of-a-kind Quilting Designs" and another spectacular Dahlia quilt on display, she agreed to provide us with the pattern for both the large 80" diameter (203 cm) size, and borders to make it 92½ square (234.8 cm) or 100" square (254 cm).

This is a challenging quilt, and is not a project for beginners. Starting out with the same technique as that used for making the Dresden Plate, the inner circle of pointy petals is pieced together. Then 16 arcs consisting of different shapes are made. Finally the outside pieces which complete the circular area are joined and then the corner shapes are added. This, by itself would make a magnificent wall hanging. To make it into a quilt, one adds borders. As you can see, the one chosen is made up of diamond shapes, squares and triangles — these straight-sided figures are in contrast to the curved, arched pieces of the Dahlia.



No. PCD-80

This giant Dahlia is part of a trend which designers seem to be taking: one takes a quilt block of any variety, blows it up until the block fills the entire top of a bed, and then finishes with borders to make it rectangular. Not only is this technique much faster than piecing dozens of smaller shapes and/or blocks, it makes for a rather spectacular graphic design.

Another version of his idea is the Sunburst pattern, or the Mariner's Compass. These have ray-like shapes which are repeated in every-increasing sizes to fill a large space. By varying the colors, either shading them in one color or using a rainbow of different colors, different, spectacular effects are created.

If you are a fabric artist and are looking for a dramatic wall treatment, or a quilter looking for a new pattern challenge, I recommend the DAHLIA — it's Super!

Ideal idea: A quilter's retreat — a three day and two night event with no TV, no newspapers or telephone — simply quilters getting together with other quilting enthusiasts. Shirley Kirsch, as she reported in The Minnesota Quilter's News, went to one at Silver Lake Camp in Minneapolis. It was sponsored by three artists, quilters and teachers, who not only gave workshops, but offered patterns and materials for making up a pattern designed especially for the occasion. Out-of-towners were sponsored by a quilter from the 'city' and spent a night in her home. Days were spent working on projects, while evenings were spent showing slides, sharing ideas and always, Show and Tell. Photos taken, preserved the memories. An ideal idea, don't you think?

Patterns available: * No. PCD-80: Giant Dahlia, 80" diameter (203 cm) designed and drafted by Patricia Cox. Complete pattern plus yardages and instructions for making two sizes of quilts: 100" sq. (254 cm) or 120" sq. (305 cm). $6.20.

* Template Plastic sufficient for making templates for border shapes for Dahlia pattern. $2.20.

Science courses boring: Suzuki

EDMONTON (CP) — High school science courses should be compulsory and should be written with the average student in mind, says Dr. David Suzuki, Canadian scientist and writer.

Suzuki told a teachers' gathering students are coming out of high schools ignorant of the impact of science on their lives because science courses have been made boring and irrelevant.

He said an understanding of science should be as basic a requirement of students leaving school as the ability to add or write a sentence.

The "whippy-trippy days of do your own thing" in school are over, he said, and students should be required to take science. The vast majority of students do not continue on to university, yet science courses have been developed as if they do.

Suzuki, who has helped popularize science with his programs on CBC television, said teachers continue to fail in helping students understand the impact of science.

He said one reason astrology and the occult have become so popular at a time when science has advanced so far is that people don't find science satisfying.

"We need a science that is more in tune with those other aspects that are part of being human."

Seniors' house needs span a wide spectrum

"I have just finished reading your new book Making the most of your Senior Years. Thanks for this truly Canadian consideration of the varied phases of senior living," writes Mrs. V. C., Vancouver.

"I found the section on housing for seniors (A Roof Over Your Head!) particularly interesting. I realize that your book contains columns written over a period of years and this means that prices and other factors re housing keep changing. I would like to see an updated series on housing. How about it?"

I have just re-read the housing section of my book and find that most of what I have said in my column over the past four years is still applicable, However, I agree that housing is so basic and so important to successful senior living that it deserves continuing consideration. It will get it from me.

It so happens that the College of Family and Consumer Studies at the University of Guelph has been taking A New Look at Old Folks, focusing particularly on housing and retirement income.

"Housing for the elderly must span the spectrum of needs from the robust and active to the handicapped and isolated," says Professor Anne Martin-Matthews, social gerontologist in the Department of Family Studies.

"Seniors who own a home often have a strong desire, bordering on an obsession, to stay in it. The three-bedroom, two-storey family home with a large yard may not seem very appropriate for a single woman in her seventies but it provides emotional and economic security as no apartment could.

"Staying in the old neighbourhood, retaining control over routines and activities, having space to accommodate visiting grandchildren and being able to entertain friends comfortably are equally important considerations.

"There is a persistent myth that the elderly live in hotels, boarding houses, rest or nursing homes. In fact less than nine per cent of Canadians over 65 live in collective housing. Most of the elderly still live in their own homes and it is an important goal to provide flexible services that enable these seniors to remain independent.

"What is appropriate in housing depends entirely on the individual. A recently retired couple will have very different preferences and needs than an 80-year-old woman on her own.

"Chronic care facilities such as nursing homes provide a level of care neither needed nor desired by most seniors. Too often in the past seniors have been shunted into chronic care because there were no alternatives; this is an expensive way to accommodate those who, with a little help, could manage on their own."

Professor John Auld, a housing specialist in U of G's Department of Consumer Studies, has been researching alternatives to chronic care — a whole series of services (visiting homemakers, visiting nurses, day centres, meals-on-wheals, call-in services, special transportation, etc.) — to enable many of the elderly to continue to live in their own houses. apartments or condominiums.

A string of pearls could cost less at a craft supplies shop than at a department store's jewelry counter. Most craft shops price pearls according to pearl size and length of strand. You need add only a clasp. Button earrings cost less, too, when you buy backings for pierced or clip-on earrings and glue on your own pretty buttons.

A few days after the couple moved in, they covered pink bedroom walls with a deep gold paint. Years later, they spread warm-white over the gold. Then the paint started peeling all the way down to the pink. The professional painter explained: 'You didn't put on a sealer and the pink won't hold any paint long without it. You'll have to scrape off to the pink before you can paint on a color that will stick."

Now that smoke detectors have dropped in price, you may want to add at least one more model to your home. Your local fire department's fire prevention bureau will have information about where to install each type of detector.

Lori Ingram at work on Pegasus, the winged horse

Clever fingers and big heart

elizabeth forbes

Lori Ingram is a single parent who maintains a home and cares for three children, aged seven to 12.

Creating ceramics is a basement hobby that she hopes, some day, to turn into a profitable career.

At the moment, however, as faces, figures, birds and animals are formed by her clever fingers, she is thinking mainly of ways to help third world people, especially in Africa, the Far East and South America.

You see, Lori is a member of a group in the Catholic diocese here that is part of a country-wide peace and development organization working ecumenically with the Anglican Church in Canada, through its Ten Days for World Development program.

"Right now Cambodia relief and the support of missions in India that are doing so much to educate destitute children are high on our agenda," she says.

"We also give help to leper colonies and to orphanages in Third World countries."

Why is Lori Ingram so passionately dedicated to this work?

Because, as it happens, she has memories of living as a child in displaced persons camps and as a young woman, of being in Third World countries and learning of conditions first hand.

"We have it so good here its hard to realize how little people have in those places," she says.

"With no social security to fall back on, they often just die."

"We can't close our eyes to their needs. We must help. The people here must become involved. Do something. Not just talk."

Lori was born of Austrian parents in Alexandria, Egypt, a country that was then a British colony.

At the time of the Second World War, Egypt decided to send all those who had ties with the Germans, through their various countries, to some neutral place.

"My parents were given a choice — New Zealand or East Africa," Lori says. "They chose East Africa."

At first the family was housed, with many others, in native huts on the edge of a jungle half way between Mombassa on the coast and Nairobi, capital of Kenya.

Later they were moved to tents in a Salvation Army camp in Nairobi, on a site that is now a downtown centre of modern buildings in that rapidly growing city.

When she was three years old her father died of pneumonia brought on through camp life. Soon after her mother married a second time, a man named Ingram, and Lori was given his surname — a name she has retained since separating from her husband.

"I grew up in Kenya during the Mau Mau troubles," she tells you.

"My mother had a chicken farm and they would come in at night and steal the chickens."

Lori married a Lebanese who was manager of a pharmaceutical firm in Nairobi and she travelled with him, on occasions, to places like the Seychelles, Mauritius, Ethopia, and through most of East and South Africa.

They lived for 14 of their married years in Kenya and the three children were born there.

Time came, however, when they had to consider whether there was a future for their young in that country and if not, what to do about it.

Decision was made to immigrate to Canada.

Lori and the children preceded her husband to North America and to California where her mother and a sister were living by then.

Seven months later her husband joined them and they moved north to Canada and to Victoria, where they have since separated.

It was in California that Lori first became interested in ceramics and pottery.

"Mainly because my sister Rita had become so proficient in both mediums and had established a number of commercial outlets," she explains.

After she had taken lessons from several well-known teachers she started to develop her own preference, and it was for ceramics.

Through a top-notch potter and ceramics artist named Marc Bellaire, she also learned to decorate bowls, urns and vases with delicately painted designs, an intricate art that takes time and much patience.

In Victoria she has concentrated, so far, on larger pieces showing animals, birds and human faces and forms.

She does say, however, that as soon as she can fit it into her busy schedule, she plans to create something on which she can paint imaginative designs.

How to fit it in is the big question.

What with maintaining a home, caring for three active children and working, as she does, in that peace and development group, there's not many free moments left in a day.

Fact is, she tells you with a quick laugh and an expressive wave of her clever hands, "I actually need a 30-hour day and a nine-day week to get everything in that I'd really like to do."

Clergy get practical help with their problems

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — For centuries, faithful Christians have prayed for deliverance from evil, often unaware that the material temptations that plagued them also tantalized priests and nuns.

But today it is generally recognized that alcoholism, drug abuse and emotional and sexual problems are as much the ills of the clergy as the rest of society.

"There's no guarantee, in one's vocation, of protection from problems," says a priest who should know.

Rev. Canice Connors, a Franciscan priest and psychologist, is executive director of Southdown rehabilitation centre — Canada's only rehabilitation facility for the clergy.

Southdown, located near this town in the rolling hills north of Toronto, is the temporary home for 30 Roman Catholic priests and nuns who came "looking for recovery and the drive to go back to the ministry," he said in an interview.

One priest had a 1,000-pill-a-month tranquillizer habit, two others broke down during mass Christmas eve while three others were finally caught up with by their nightmarish experiences in Second World War concentration camps.

Connors, 45, said some problems were caused by ignorance shown in the past by the superiors of religious orders, who accepted candidates for the priesthood, or the veil, without thorough screening.

"Now there is more extensive screening, more preventive work within the clergy, recognition of needs and far more recognition of the clergy's humanity," he said.

Alcoholism is the most widespread problem among priests, but homosexuality and prescription drugs are catching up. Nuns tend more toward the sort of escapism offered by tranquillizers. Severe depression is the most common emotional problem.

Since the centre was founded in 1966 with a $200,000 provincial grant, interest-free debentures and parish donations, more than 1,000 persons have been treated and returned to their ministries. There has been a steady stream of non-Catholic patients but the majority have been Catholic.

The Alcoholics Anonymous philosophy plays a major role in Southdown's therapy program. Residents attend three weekly group meetings as well as individual therapy sessions.

Connors said clerical garb is immediately shed because the cassocks and habits "are signs of authority and accent differences."

Exercise, especially yoga which combines meditation and fitness, is an essential ingredient, but by far the most important therpy is provided by the residents themselves.

None of the prescribed therapy conducted by Southdown's 17 specialists is half as valuable as the support each resident gives another.

"The main variable is the quality of community life."

The first 10 days of residency are strictly for assessment, and stays range from seven weeks to six months.

Connors said only two patients have abandoned their religious roles after treatment and then only because they realized they did not have true vocations for the clergy.

Priceless treasure uncovered

DUBLIN (Reuter) — A hoard of 8th century treasure, including a priceless silver and gold chalice, has been found in an Irish bog, the government announced. The discovery is regarded as the most significant Irish archaeological and historical find this century.

The treasure was uncovered about two weeks ago in County Tipperary in the Irish midlands.

It consists of a chalice, a strainer, a large tray or paten, its stand and a large bronze basin, which was used to cover the other treasures.

Pooped people tough problem

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some people are perpetually out of steam, and a Vancouver endocrinologist says doctors are often hard put to find the cause of their problem.

Dr. Martin Hoffman said the difficulty often lies in communication between doctor and patient.

"Many people do not have the language skills to accurately describe what they are feeling so that another person (the doctor) can understand," Hoffman said.

"Perhaps it is really weakness — for instance a sudden inability to raise her arm to brush her hair, which she has been doing all her life. Or maybe it has become virtually impossible to make it up the stairs without great shortness of breath and a need to rest for minutes at the conclusion."

These symptoms could indicate illnesses quite apart from those represented by chronic tiredness.

Chronic fatigue might be a result of hypothyroidism, which is caused by an under-active thyroid gland.

Soviet bugs pooh-poohed

OTTAWA (CP) — Reports that sophisticated electronic equipment housed in the Soviet embassy in Ottawa enables the Russians to eavesdrop on top-secret government communications were greeted with laughter, puzzlement and silence during the weekend.

"Oh, it all sounds so very dramatic and exciting," laughed Patrick Gossage, press secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau. "It sounds like a hype job."

The reports, published by The Citizen and The Edmonton Journal, quote unnamed RCMP sources as saying Soviet equipment, housed on the roof of their embassy near RCMP headquarters and the defence department, means the Russians can eavesdrop on highly confidential telephone and microwave beam communications of the force itself, the federal cabinet and the defence department.

Both newspapers said the electronic eavesdropping forces Canada to change telephone numbers for secret calls, switch radio frequencies regularly and introduce new military and diplomatic codes as a matter of routine.

The Journal said the Soviet techniques represent a major breakthrough and a devastating attack on Canada's security. The Citizen said the RCMP is concerned the Soviets can even monitor the force's surveillance of the embassy.

However, Gossage was unimpressed. "I think the cabinet is pretty safe. No secret cabinet communications are sent out by (radio) wave."

A defence department official said the reports are "news to us" but declined further comment.

Supt. John Benthem, official spokesman for the RCMP, would not immediately confirm or deny the reports.

Queen's message to Commonwealth

OTTAWA (UPC) — Governor General Edward Schreyer today released the following message from Queen Elizabeth II as 42 Commonwealth countries commemorate the fourth Commonwealth Day around the world:

"Mankind has just entered a new decade which calls with urgency for renewed efforts to tackle the many problems that continue to trouble the world. Their resolution demands vision and effort, dedication and co-operation. The Commonwealth alone does not have the answers to these problems, but it can play a part in helping the world to find them.

"In 1979 at Lusaka, and since then, the Commonwealth has shown its vigour and its usefulness. Through their collective efforts, Commonwealth nations have helped to promote peace and enlarge freedom. By being committed to these goals, they have shown that the Commonwealth is a resource for the world's good.

"The challenge to us is to strengthen that capacity and to put it to good use for the peoples of the Commonwealth and, most of all, for our young people. Their cheerful enthusiasm, of which I saw so much evidence in my travels in the past year, is a symbol of hope for the future."

Roy to run in byelection

QUEBEC (CP) — Federal Social Credit leader Fabien Roy announced Sunday he will be a candidate in the March 24 federal byelection in Frontenac riding, and said he will vote yes in the spring referendum on sovereignty-association.

Roy made the double announcement at the end of a weekend meeting of about 150 supporters.

Roy, defeated in his home riding of Beauce in the Feb. 18 general election, will try a political comeback in Frontenac where the election was deferred after the death last month of Social Credit candidate Nelson Lessard.

The party was wiped off the electoral map in the Feb. 18. vote but Roy is convinced he can make a comeback in Frontenac, a riding neighboring the Beauce which went Social Credit on the 1960s.

On the referendum question, Roy said he will recommend that supporters of the party vote yes "to keep the door open for negotiations."

But he said the party itself would not join any umbrella group during the referendum campaign and members would be free as individuals to support the yes or no option.

"This is not an unconditional yes to anything," Roy told his cheering supporters. "This is a yes to negotiation.

"We recommend a real Confederation with maximum decentralization towards the provinces."

Acid rain problem at crisis levels: scientists

By MARLENE ORTON

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists have pushed the panic button for the second time in a decade in hopes of preventing an environmental disaster spawned by man and nutured by government indifference in Canada and United States.

Environment officials in both countries now are working feverishly to head off the imminent destruction of croplands and lakes in eastern North America by acid rain.

Ten years ago the ecological emergency was phosphorus pollution in the Great Lakes. It was then cited as "the most serious water pollution problem having long-term, international significance."

Today officials are battling acid rain which, in a familiar ring, is described as the most serious environmental problem the country has ever faced, although scientists warned of its danger many years ago.

The most urgent task is to reduce sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxide emissions on either side of the border before damage from the resulting sulphuric precipitation becomes irreversible.

An immediate concern is arousing American public interest and support since a large portion of the gases are spewed from U.S. smoke stacks and blown northwards.

The SOX and NOX, as researchers call sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides, are mainly products of smelters in Canada and power generating plants in the U.S. The technology enabling the offenders to curb their emissions would cost billions.

Thus, solving the acid rain dilemma is an economic problem as well as a scientific one.

Ray Robinson, head of the Canadian Environmental Protection Service, says officials are "face to face with the same kind of situation" they witnessed in the early 1970s with phosphorus.

Then, the problem required immediate attention after years of neglect or the lakes might never recover from the pollution assault.

"And they caught it in the nick of time. The challenge is, can we do the same with acid rain?"

Phosphorus, a natural fertilizer, was dumped into the lakes in various forms and in such immense quantities that water plant growth exploded, used up valuable oxygen and choked the life out of the Great Lakes — especially lakes Erie and Ontario.

The process was known as eutrophication. It created dirty, ugly stinking beaches and contributed significantly to a drop in fish population.

The U.S. and Canada moved swiftly after a study from the impartial International Joint Commission identified the sources and the extent of the phosphorus pollution and urged immediate action.

Through an agreement engineered by the commission, both countries attempted to curtail the tonnes of phosphorus that had poured daily into the lakes for many years.

Phosphate in laundry soap was banned by Canada and some states.

Better municipal sewage systems to control human waste with its high phosphorus content were required. Most offending Canadian communities installed them. The Americans are still behind schedule.

A new commission report, soon to be released, will recommend that both countries reduce phosphorus running off agricultural lands into the lakes.

All phases of the plan to halt eutrophication have not been completed, yet the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement of 1972 is called a success story.

Richard Vollenwider of the National Water Research Institute in Burlington, Ont. — part of the environment department — says much good work was accomplished in the last 10 years.

"In Lake Erie, we can see we succeeded," Vollenwider says. "We have slowed eutrophication tremendously.

"In Lake Ontario, there are definite signs that the lake is reacting very well to the (international) program."

A joint international study completed last fall partly identified the SOX and NOX sources and attempted to assess the possible damage the pollutants had incurred.

But more research, hence more money, is required to understand the complexities of acid rain.

With acid rain, unlike phosphorus, the industries which are polluting are not located in the areas affected by the pollution.

Acid rain is a by-product of a larger problem, termed long-range transport of air pollutants. This means the SOX and NOX are deposited thousands of kilometres away from their sources and undergo chemical transformations along the way.

It is a reaction with water vapor in the atmosphere which produces acid rain.

Researchers at Domtar Ltd. of Quebec discovered that sharply elevated levels of mercury in fish were also linked with acid rain.

Instead of evaporating, the mercury accumulates in fish and in acidic waters the toxic monomethyl mercury is created.

Federal scientists have not yet investigated this aspect of the problem.

Dan Kelley, director of air pollution programs, says "we don't have the time or resources to look at bigger problems."

The issue also raises the question of who should pay the billions of dollars to help reverse the environmental damage resulting from acid rain — the firms responsible for the pollution, or the consumers, fishermen and other industries thousands of kilometres away who are affected by it.

Says Robinson: "The challenge is greater now because of the politics of the situation."

Ten years ago consumers in both Canada and the U.S. were aware that detergent manufacturers would spend millions to change their products for the sake of the Great Lakes.

In this matter, however, experts agree that Canadians are generally more informed about acid rain although the major pollution sources are in the U.S.

But Bob Rauch of the Environmental Defence Fund in Washington says that situation is slowly changing as congressional hearings into acid rain begin.

"I think the issue is really beginning to take off," Rauch says. "The problem is going to be more difficult to solve than phosphorus pollution. The stakes in this country of cleaning up the coal-fired plants are very, very high."

Other complications arise as an oil-starved U.S. turns to its large coal resources — coal being a significant contributor to the excessive SOX and NOX emissions.

In Canada, acid rain was seemingly overlooked until the Progressive Conservatives took power in 1979, replacing a Liberal government which had whittled down the environment department.

Environmentalists are concerned that the new Liberal government, which defeated the Conservatives in February, may again play down environmental issues.

Rick Pratt of the Canadian Nature Federation says the Liberals will probably "continue to cut the environment department

Opening lead — king of hearts.

Some deals are more dramatic than others, and quite often this is largely because of a combination of unusual circumstances. For example, take this hand played in the 1972 spring national pair championship.

There were 732 pairs in the event and the outcome was that Barry Crane and Dr. John Fisher finished in a dead tie with Merle Tom and Matt Granovetter. Each pair scored 882½ match points! Probably even more remarkable was the fact that this was the third year in succession that Crane and Fisher had won the event!

The accompanying deal was played when the two pairs met head-on in the final round of the four-session event. Crane was West and opened one spade, Tom bid two diamonds, Fisher said two spades, and Granovetter bid three notrump.

Crane stirred up the cauldron a bit by leaping to five spades, and South doubled when that bid came around to him. North wisely did not stand for the double — Crane would have made the contract with an overtrick — but in doing so North made the overly imaginative bid of five notrump, bravely sticking by his decision after West had doubled.

Had North bid six diamonds and bought the contract at that price, he would have made the slam easily against a spade lead, or gone down after a heart or club lead. But the actual final contract — five notrump doubled — was sheer murder.

Crane led the K-A and another heart. Fisher took the third heart lead with the queen, returned the ten of spades, and, when the smoke had cleared, Granovetter had gone down nine tricks — 2,600 points!

All of which goes to show how championships are won, lost or tied!

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart
and gay

Scattering sunshine
the way

You know how we love you
love you yet

Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

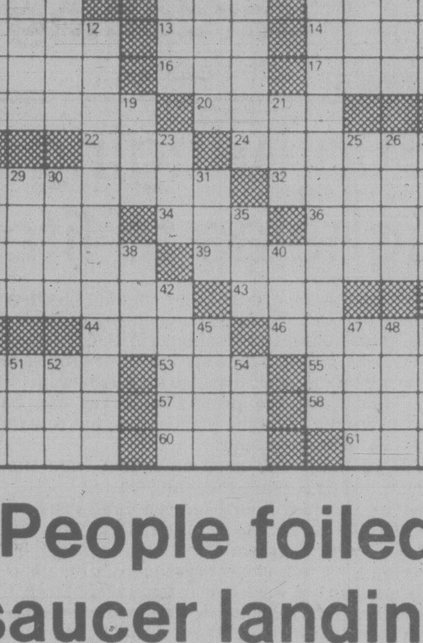
Answer to Friday's puzzle.



People foiled saucer landing

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — The man who drew 10,000 people to an all-night vigil to wait for a flying saucer and a "close encounter of the third kind" said the spaceship did not land because 40 people invaded the landing pad.

Edilcio Barbosa made that statement in a television interview, then disappeared.

About 10,000 people traveled to the town of Casimiro de Abreu 80 miles from Rio de Janeiro Friday night and waited all night for the promised 5:20 a.m. visit from Jupiter that was to return four earthlings who Barbosa claimed had been spirited away by spacemen.

"The ship did not land because at the exact instant of set-down 40 people were lying right on the landing pad," the thin, bespectacled Barbosa said.

Some residents of Casimiro de Abreu said Barbosa, who claims to be a messenger from Jupiter, should be charged for disturbing the peace.

Local police chief Heralmir Rodrigues said he was studying the possibility but would have to consult with his state security superiors in Rio de Janeiro.

Disruption taught

LONDON (Reuter) — About 100 schoolchildren aged between 12 and 18 met Saturday for lectures on organizing school strikes and undermining teachers' authority.

Red Rebel, the youth section of the left-wing Socialist Workers party, held the lectures as part of its effort to win recognition by school authorities.

"It's a bit like the start of trade unionism," one speaker said. "The police are trying to smash us."

A notice for the conference in the party's newspaper said: "Find out how to disrupt your school in six easy lessons."

Sun bringing fuchsias to life

Fuchsias again appear in the column; this time it is those that were wintered outdoors in a protected place, among shrubs for instance. With dry leaves heaped loosely around the pots and lower branches, the warmth of the sun is bringing them to new life.

At this time, the protective leaves can be removed from around the plant stems, but remain packed about the containers.

The rootballs still need protection from sun, drying wind and possible recurring frosts.

Green shoots will now be seen down near soil level or at the base of the stems. This will vary with the varieties being grown. Don't do pruning yet, but first allow the green shoots to gradually strengthen.

In another two weeks, near the end of March, if weather is suitably moderate, the top growth can be cut off down to just above the new growths which are seen at the base.

There will still be the need to give light covering over the plants to protect the shoots on nights when frosts are expected.

The loss of newly started growth delays flowering by as much as three weeks, even more in some varieties, so be aware of eary evening cooling and clear sky conditions throughout March and April.

Fuchsias that are from new plants last year may be repotted near the end of April when root action is indicated by new shoots above ground. Remove most of the old soil from the rootball with a pointed stick without breaking off too many roots. Give them a fresh loose fibrous mixture of leafmould, old woods moss and well-dampened peatmoss. Well-rotted compost is good; it may need dampened peatmoss and sand added.

As indicated above, the fuchsias will still need protection from night or early-morning frosts during April. Hold off fertilizer until later in the season. Occasional watering will be needed but don't saturate.

Old fuchsias, more than one full season of flowering, become quite woody stemmed at the base. Although they will give satisfactory results for a second year, it is wise to start a few new plants from cuttings taken this spring. During April when shoots are about three inches long, take enough for your needs. Root them around the edge of a four-or-five-inch container of sandy compost. Keep them on a windowsill (if no greenhouse) under plastic to prevent wilting, and shielded from hot sun. Try to reach the ideal medium conditions.

After rooting, pot up singly into small pots. when re-established begin pinching for bushiness. Later, put into baskets, patio pots or planters as desired. They should be placed in partial shade and out of wind for a week or so to become well established. Dehydration would be a disaster at this stage. If days turn out to be really warm at the time, misting with clear water around noon would be beneficial, but not late in the day.

The hardy outdoor fuchsias, which remain in the garden all year, are mostly varieties and forms of Fuchsia magellanica. They are not yet showing signs of growth with us, though in warmer gardens they will be more active.

These are treated basically in the same way, gradually clearing out the protective winter leaves at the base, and then pruning the tops back to where new green shoots will be seen low down near soil level. Old plants may even be lifted and divided, with worn-out parts discarded. This may seem drastic, but new canes grow fast during summer.

Upset parents organize to battle Moonie cult

VANCOUVER (CP) — Margaret and Ray Steffich say their 27-year-old son has been brainwashed by a religious cult in the United States — and they have formed a group to stop other young people from falling into the same trap.

Last year, the couple made an unsuccessful attempt to get their son back. They went to San Francisco and kidnapped Michael off the street.

Michael is a Moonie, a member of the Unification Church headed by Korean evangelist Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

The couple hired two ex-Moonies to deprogram Michael, but on the sixth day of deprogramming state police and Oakland detectives raided the motel room where Michael was being kept.

"Another day and he would have been out," Steffich said. "We were that close."

The parents escaped charges when their son signed a document saying he would not prosecute. Michael returned to the Moonies and continues to live in the U.S.

"At first we were fine when we got home," Mrs. Steffich said. "We thought we had done something and we would live with it. But after that wore off we got really upset. How many other kids are going to go down there and get picked up?"

So far, the Steffich's group, Positive Action Against Cults is small, but it plans to incorporate as a non-profit organization and prepare a brochure.

Members hope to go into schools, talking to grade 12 students about cults.

Michael, a former college student, was recruited by a young Moonie woman when he was sightseeing in San Francisco in May, 1977.

It was months before his parents, sister and two brothers realized he had become a Moonie. For a while they were resigned to it.

"Then Jonestown came in November and we just panicked," Steffich said. "We decided we had to do something so we concocted this scheme and went south in April."

Candidates must be at least 17 and must hold the Red Cross Water Safety Leader award and a current life-saving award of bronze medallion or higher.

Candidates more than 20 years of age who do not hold the leader award may apply as mature students if they hold a current bronze medallion.

Contractors fight school labor force

Greater use of school district tradesmen for proposed construction jobs has run into strong opposition from the Construction Association of Victoria.

CAV president David Weller, representing more than 250 contractors and suppliers in Greater Victoria, said in a letter to District 61 chairman Carol Pickup:

The association "must object in the strongest terms to the decision of your board relating to the undertaking of $2.7 million in capital construction by means of board work forces."

He said the proposed hiring of full time and temporary staff to supplement the force increases the association's concern.

An immediate meeting with the board is requested and in the meantime the CAV is asking for a freeze on the hiring and self-contracting plan.

Weller said the school district will become a large contractor working without competition if the policy is carried out. The association has invited Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, representing the unions, to take part in the discussion through a joint liaison committee.

School trustees decided the district should do more of its own capital contracting — up to jobs valued at a specified limit — as a more efficient way of working.

Weller's letter is on the agenda for tonight's school board meeting.

Meanwhile, another matter arising out of labor concerns appears to have come to a temporary halt.

Pickup will tell trustees tonight she has decided to re-establish contact with Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, although the board voted in January to withdraw its membership.

GVLRA is the bargaining organization for municipal, school and regional employers in negotions with public service staff.

The board believes it can best represent itself in negotiations, pointing to a much improved atmosphere and spirit of co-operation than exists between the unions and GVLRA.

Pickup said although the required steps had been taken to disengage the school district, there had been no clear direction from the Labor Relations Board which recognizes the participants.

While awaiting the board's authority, Pickup said she would attend GVLRA meetings.

Woman's body sought by air-sea rescue

Aircraft from CFB Comox and a Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft continued the search today for a female crew member believed to have fallen overboard from the fishing vessel Leanne late Sunday afternoon at the Iona jetty in Steveston.

A search was being made of the Vancouver shoreline, as well as north to the Sunshine coast and west to the Gulf Islands.

The name of the woman is being withheld until officials can notify her next of kin.

More shots urged for children

Most children in the Capital Regional District are well protected against communicable diseases, but deputy regional health officer Dr. Brian Allen said today he'd like to see the record even better.

He said that last year 87 per cent of district children coming out of Grade 1 had been immunized against diphtheria and polio.

The CRD's record was among the top five or six in the province.

"But that's not the game," said Allen. "We'd like to see the figure in the 90-per-cent range."

In 1977, only 79 per cent of the first-grade youngsters were protected.

In Prince George, Dr. Andrew Ross, chief public health officer, said Sunday a six-year-old boy has been confirmed as a case of active diphtheria.

"He was fully treated when he entered hosital a week ago and now he's feeling just fine," Ross said.

Treatment was started before diphtheria was confirmed.

The disease was discovered at Hart Highway elementary school but the boy was the only active case confirmed. Ross said 313 shots have been given and all 280 children at the school brought up to date with their immunization shots.

Five Grade 1 students and their teacher are being treated at home as carriers of the disease which affects the blood and can cause heart failure.

Ross said the six-year-old boy was up to date in his immunization shots and although he contracted the illness, the shots made it a mild case.

There were two cases of diphtheria in the Capital Regional District last year, but Allen says one case involved a youngster, a carrier, who moved here with his family from Alberta.

"So in actual fact we had only one case in the CRD in 1979," Allen said, adding there have been no recorded cases this year.

Allen said that of all the girls coming out of Grade 5 in the district's schools last year, 85 per cent had been vaccinated against German measles.

The disease can cause birth defects if it occurs in pregnant women.

Saving farms 'damnably' vital

VANCOUVER (CP) — The new chairman of the provincial Agricultural Land Commission says farmland preservation is "damnably important" in B.C. but he can't say how he will avoid the frustrations which led to the resignation of former chairman Gary Runka.

Mills Clarke, 66, said in an interview from Nanaimo Sunday that he will have to study the powers of the commission and will do as good a job as possible.

"Then we'll see what happens from there. I wouldn't have accepted the job if I didn't think that (farmland preservation) was very, very important. Agricultural land is very scarce in this province."

Clarke said surveys have shown that only 2.5 to three per cent of the total land in B.C. is suitable for agricultural purposes because of climate and soil conditions.

Much of that land was developed for other uses before the Agricultural Land Reserve was established in 1973 to freeze all farmland, he said. However, people are anxious to use the land for commercial purposes to serve the population which tends to form around prime agricultural areas.

One of the results of that conflict forced Runka to quit in disgust after a cabinet committee overturned a commission decision to keep 642 acres of Langley farmland in the reserve.

Asked if the province can afford to take any land out of the freeze, Clarke said he will have to decide each case on its merits because every situation is unique.

He did say, however, that food will be in short supply in the future.

B.C. now relies on imported food from the southern United States but the population of that area is expanding and less food will be available for export in the future, he said.

In addition, increased fuel costs mean prices for imported food will continue to rise and preserving local farmland is one way to deal with the problem.

"The continent at large has the problem. The population is growing very fast . . . there is a major energy shortage and food is energy. It's human energy and it's damnably important."

Clarke is a graduate of the University of B.C. and of Pennsylvania State University where he obtained his PhD in agronomy in 1954. He began working at the federal agricultural research station in Agassiz during the 1930s and rose to superintendent in 1954 which he held until 1973.

He worked as research co-ordinator for the federal agriculturral department in Ontario from 1973 until retiring last year.

Was big flash a neutron bomb test?

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — There is a nagging suspicion among scientists studying the mysterious nuclear explosion last Sept. 22 near South Africa that it was a neutron bomb.

"We have no evidence that it was a neutron bomb but the possibility has been discussed more than once," said one source close to the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. "It's one of the few things that could explain why we've never found any radioactive fallout from the explosion."

Designed for use on the battlefield, a neutron bomb generates a small fireball that produces little physical destruction but a huge excess of neutrons. The neutrons are lethal to people in the vicinity but do not travel far and do not persist in the atmosphere the way radioactive fallout does.

A neutron bomb would also explain the low strength of the explosion seen last Sept. 22 by an orbiting Vela satellite, whose optical sensors (called "bangmeters") witnessed what scientists say was an explosion with a force between two and four kilotons.

"An explosion of a neutron weapon would certainly explain the low yield of that event," one nuclear weapons scientist from the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory said. "It takes a complicated design process to build a neutron bomb but I wouldn't be shocked at the idea that somebody was smart enough to test one."

The Central Intelligence Agency has told Congress that if the event seen in the South African skies Sept. 22 was a nuclear explosion, then it suspects Israel or South Africa or both as the source of the event.

Weapons analysts say they can understand why both Israel and South Africa would be interested in developing a neutron bomb, which could be an effective last-ditch battlefield defence for both countries in all-out war with their neighbors.

So far as anybody knows, no country has ever tested a neutron bomb. There was some speculation that France may have tested one two years ago at its South Pacific underground test site but it has never been confirmed.

Still another suspicion that nags scientists about the mystery explosion is the possibility that it was not the first in the skies near South Africa. There is a distinct possibility that other nuclear explosions took place below the Cape of Good Hope before Sept. 22.

Sources point out that the Vela that picked up the fireball was literally out of position the night of the event. Put into orbit 10 years ago, the Vela has lost altitude with time and was circling Earth in a way that brought it over the same spots on Earth at unpredictable times.

"We were lucky the Vela picked up the fireball because if it had not been out of position it would have missed it," one source said. "There is a chance the same Vela missed other explosions before Sept. 22, when it was in the position it was supposed to be in."

One source said that whoever set off the explosion in the middle of the night on Sept. 22, could have timed it so that Vela would miss it. The source said the panel of scientists convened by the White House to unravel the mystery even looked into the possibility that somebody tried to fool the Vela satellite into mistaking the explosion for some other phenomenon.

"There were many light flashes Vela saw that had some of the characteristics of nuclear explosions," the source said. "The panel considered the possibility that some were deliberate flashes of laser beams to confuse the satellite but the possibility was set aside. There wasn't enough similarity between the Sept. 22 flash and the hundreds of other flashes it saw."

So much of the puzzling explosion remains a mystery that next month the White House will reconvene the panel of outside scientists it brought together last November to investigate it. The White House thought the panel had finished its work in January and even drafted a report that was said to summarize the panel's findings. The report has never been made public.

Trident back in air again by Monday?

ROLLING OUT a barrel of names is CFAX's Shelley Cooper who is really only showing less than half of one of two rolls of petition forms filled in the station's Save-the-Maggie campaign. The station cut off counting at 10 this morning with about 32,000 names of persons calling on the government to leave the Princess Marguerite on the Victoria-Seattle route this summer. The petition is to be presented to Premier Bill Bennett on Wednesday afternoon.

The Trident aircraft plant in North Saanich — forced to close two months ago when the former Conservative government cut off funding — could be back in operation as early as next Monday.

Federal minister of industry, trade and commerce Herb Gray said in an interview from Ottawa today he expects to present a proposal on resumption of funding to the Treasury Board on Thursday.

"I am very much aware of the seriousness of the situation," Gray said. "It is our intention to move to carry out the commitment of restoring the help the previous Liberal government had offered to Trident."

The former Liberal government had pledged to give the company loans and grants totalling $4 million but the Conservative government cut off funds after $2 million had been spent.

If Treasury Board agrees, the company could be back in business on Monday, Trident's chief executive officer Jerry Vaverek said.

However, Vaverek was cautious about Gray's announcement.

"It'll be nice if it happens and when it happens but this problem has been going on since last summer. There have been a lot of good intentions and a lot of meetings. I'll believe it Friday morning."

Newell Morrison, president of the B.C. Development Corporation, said: "It's terrific. I feel quite optimistic."

BCDC has promised to provide the company $4 million in loans if the federal government lives up to its original agreement.

Morrison said that once he receives notice of Treasury Board approval the corporation will advance funds immediately.

Vaverek said about half the 107 employees laid-off have moved out of the area but didn't see any problem finding replacements.

Market Square for sale

Market Square in downtown Victoria has been put up for sale for $5.5 million by owner Abacus Cities Ltd. of Alberta.

The company was forced into receivership last year.

The project has more than 50 tenants, ranging from restaurants to two bookstores and offices on the third floor, and occupies more than half of the square block bounded by Johnson, Wharf, Pandora and Government streets.

Fort Victoria Properties Ltd., Sam Bawlf's development company, first transformed the ramshackle hotels and warehouses into an attractive shopping centre with interior courtyard. When he became an MLA in 1975, Bawlf sold his firm to Abacus.

Driver dies on Malahat

He was Martin John Philip of 22 West Burnside.

Colwood police said Philip's car was spotted in the bush by a passer-by at 2:30 p.m. Using a tracking dog, police found the body 30 metres from the wreckage.

Police believe the accident occurred early Sunday morning.

Please don't throw us out, Glenshiel oldsters plead

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

The condemned Glenshiel Hotel was festooned with protest banners early this morning by hotel staff and relatives of the 60 elderly residents facing eviction by the provincial government.

Large banners and signs with slogans like "Don't Break Up Our Home" hung from windows and from the roof of the 75-year-old hotel at 606 Douglas.

Residents are angry about an announcement by Housing Minister James Chabot last month the government-owned building will close in two years and residents placed in other institutions.

Glenshiel manager Bert Hanson said the staff is solidly behind the protest and raised $250 to match an equal amount the senior citizens collected among themselves to pay for sign material and for a petition to save the guest home.

The elderly residents and their families and friends worked all weekend making the signs.

They want the people of Victoria to help them in their fight to keep the hotel operating.

Average age of the residents is 80, and some are in their 90s.

Six-year resident Olive Stuart, 80, could barely be heard above the noise of a large sign slapping in the breeze outside her room window as she told the Times residents won't leave without a fight.

"The last thing in the world they want to do is get out of this place," she said.

Some of them are still in shock from the announcement the building is too expensive to repair.

The news came two weeks ago from government officials who arrived at the building during lunch, she said.

Chabot said the building is at the stage where it would require massive amounts of money to bring up to standard for long-term use.

The government will spend about $180,000 on minor repairs to make the hotel comfortable while alternative accommodation is being found for residents. The process could take up to two years.

Mrs. Stuart worked two days at a sewing machine stitching protest banners.

"We came here of our own free will and we pay our own way. We've been allowed to bring our own furniture and we feel at home," she said.

Residents pay $15 a day for room and board and maid service.

The hotel atmosphere makes guests feel independent and the building is conveniently located downtown.

"It's nothing to take a taxi down to Eatons, but if we got put someplace way out like Oak Bay Manor, why, we couldn't afford to

Welcome to the 'we' decade

TORONTO (CP) — In the eyes of Toronto's advertising industry, the "me generation" of the 1970s has been supplanted in the 1980s by the "we generation."

The advertisers say the new trends — and therefore the new marketing weapons — this decade will be togetherness and emotion.

"In a sense," says one Toronto advertising executive, "what we're doing is wrapping up your emotions and selling them back to you and making you think it's a bargain."

Another puts it more bluntly. "We went about as far as we could with the self-centred me-decade advertising in the 1970s. Now we're moving into the we decade."

What exactly is this new phenomenon?

Advertising men say it is appeal through universal and immediately identifiable emotional symbols such as babies, puppies, and grandmothers surrounded by warmly approving friends and neighbors.

It is the exact opposite of 1970s advertising, stressing independence, assertiveness and self-indulgence, they say.

"The '80s will be an era of emotions, sharing, relationships and above all, the family," says Norman Sylvester, vice-president of advertising of Pepsico in Purchase, N.Y.

To convey this new attitude, Canadian advertisers are planning new types of commercials to tap these altruistic feelings.

"Back to family feeling is the message this advertising season," says Jerry Goodis, a Toronto advertising executive.

"You can expect a whole series of ads showing caring people depending on each other," he says.

Some people in the advertising business believe these attitudes were always present in society, only to be pushed in the background the past 25 years.

"For more than 100 years, North Americans stressed values like sharing, family and self-denial," says Arthur Shapiro, senior vice-president of a New York market firm. "It's only in the last 25 years they have focused on the self."

Tourists needn't worry about a gas shortage

A feared gasoline shortage in British Columbia this summer is unlikely to occur, spokesmen for the oil industry said today.

In the short term, for the rest of 1980, the industry foresees no problems, said Jim Lefrancois, retail sales manager in Vancouver for Shell Oil's western Canada operations.

"We don't foresee anyone in the industry running out of gasoline," he said.

"Right now it's a pretty comfortable position. It's tight but it's tenable."

Weekend press and television reports speculated there wouldn't be enough gasoline to go around, especially if an expected deluge of U.S. tourists arrives on our doorstep this year, attracted by cheap gas.

John Plul, executive-director of Tourism B.C., says his department is aware of a possible gasoline shortage, so tourist promotion this year will stress group travel by bus, plane and train.

He's predicting a 10 per cent increase in visits by Americans this year. About 3.7 million Americans visited B.C. last year.

"If they get the message to come here, we're not going to turn cars away from the border," Plul said.

Dr. Harry Swain, assistant deputy energy minister, said: "I think we're all right. I think we'll squeak through even with the increase in tourists, but if there are any serious refinery problems such as mechanical breakdowns we'll really be stretched."

Lefrancois said the same thing, but noted that refinery or pipeline breakdown is always a factor, and so far B.C. has not gone short of gasoline.

The worst situation was during last summer's strike by refinery workers, he added, but everyone who needed gas could get it.

Swain said he would talk to government travel officials in Washington state about reports that potential visitors to B.C. are being told gasoline is cheap and plentiful in the province.

In the U.S., motorists are faced with a near-record gasoline surplus, but Americans are driving less and it raises the question whether many will be willing to drive more than a few hundred miles up to Canada.

In Washington state gas is about 32 cents a litre, compared with 22.7 here.

Oil analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday U.S. gasoline consumption was down 11 per cent in the last three months, compared with the same period in 1979.

"Unless people now start buying more gasoline than they have been at current prices, there could be a surplus of publicly available gasoline in March in the nation as a whole," he said.

"It's a 180-degree turnaround that few oil company executives foresaw."

It's the other way around in Canada.

"People just aren't slowing down," said Lefrancois.

Gasoline sales in Canada were up 2.3 per cent last year, 3.5 per cent in B.C. This province's total consumption is expected to increase 4.1 per cent this year.

Here's handy-dandy guide to the office troublemakers

NEW YORK (AP) — In every office about 10 per cent of the employees are "relentlessly difficult" to work with, a California management consultant says in Time Magazine.

The newsmagazine said that Robert Bramson, after studying 400 office managers and other workers, found that office staffers fall into three categories: 10 per cent are the office troublemakers, 70 per cent are unable to cope with the troublemakers and 20 per cent are not bothered by them.

Bramson, 54, said his office-harmony program is based on a simple premise: difficult people learn their bad behavior "precisely because it has worked for them (and) elicits predictable, typical reaction from other people."

He described five types of troublemakers and said each should be dealt with differently.

— The hostile-aggressives include the "Sherman tanks," "snipers" and "exploders."

The way to cope with the loud, pushy Sherman is to look him "straight in the eye, call him by name and state your disagreement using phrases like 'in my opinion,' " Bramson said.

Snipers use sarcasm or irony and "should be asked to explain and expand their remarks," he said.

Exploders should be allowed to vent their anger, but if that doesn't clear the air, he advised bosses to "leave the room, saying you will return in five minutes."

— The second group of troublemakers are the complainers, who "lace their speech with 'always' and 'never.' " He advises bosses merely to respond with "ums" and "ahs."

— Third, he said, are the indecisive troublemakers, who come in two varieties: "analysts" afraid of making a mistake and needing lots of support, and "be nicers," afraid of making enemies, who should not be shown any enthusiasm.

— The fourth variety are the unresponsive troublemakers, "too frightened, confused or hostile to discuss matters." Bramson suggests trying to "outwait" them by staring at them in a "friendly fashion" without saying a word. He said chances are that the unresponsive troublemaker will break first.

— Bramson dubbed the fifth group the know-it-alls, who come in two types. There are the "real experts who are right about 75 per cent of the time, and the phoney experts who are inept and usually wrong."

All week to probe Vogel

Attorney-General Allan Williams said today his review of allegations against deputy Richard Vogel could take all week and he will have no comment until it is completed.

Vogel went on indefinite leave of absence Friday after a Thursday night CBC report alleged he had interfered in three court cases on behalf of friends.

The NDP opposition, meanwhile, suggested a fourth case of possible interference — the decision not to lay influence-peddling charges against Socred MLA Bill Ritchie despite RCMP and crown counsel recommendations that charges be laid.

Immigrants eyed to fill 600,000 West jobs

WINNIPEG (CP) — The federal government may increase immigration to help fill more than 600,000 new jobs in western Canada in the 1980s, the federal minister of employment and immigration said Saturday.

As well, Lloyd Axworthy said, the government plans to step up job training for natives and women.

Axworthy, who is also minister responsible for the status of women, told a press conference here he expects 300,000 new jobs will be created in the West in the next six years, and more than 600,000 by 1990.

He said the West already faces a shortage of skilled labor. From 1971-1978, he said, employment opportunities in the West increased 33 per cent, while the labor force grew by 30.4 per cent.

Axworthy said the government is considering increased immigration as part of a thorough examination of its refugee immigration program.

He said the Liberal government wants to assure that the benefits of an economic boom in one or two provinces are shared by the others. Specifically, he said, Manitoba's manufacturing and other industries should benefit from Alberta's resources.

Khomeini limits meeting, transfer of hostages off

TEHRAN (CP) — Ayatollah Khomeini said today a United Nations' commission can question U.S. embassy hostages involved in "crimes" against Iran, but the commission cannot see all the captives unless it issues its report in Tehran, the state radio said.

"We shall fight against the U.S. government to the end of our life," Khomeini said.

Meanwhile, Reuters news agency quoted a militant spokesman as saying there will be no transfer of the hostages from the control of the militants following the statement by Khomeini.

"The reason we wanted to transfer the hostages to the Revolutionary Council was because of pressures being placed on us," the spokesman said. "That pressure has now been removed. We will keep the hostages."

Khomeini's statement appeared to repudiate the decision by the Revolutionary Council ordering militants holding the 50 hostages for 128 days to allow the commission to meet all the hostages or hand them over to government custody.

Khomeini's statement to the nation also ordered the embassy militants "to deliver copies of all documents concerning the U.S. intervention and the traitor shah" to the UN commission.

The commission was meeting with President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr as Khomeini's statement was made public.

The commission of lawyers already has made it clear it considered a meeting with all of the Americans a necessary part of its mandate which includes hearing Iranian grievances against the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and working to resolve the U.S.-Iran crisis.

There was no immediate response from government spokesmen to the announcement which appears to undercut Bani-Sadr in his efforts to find a resolution to the hostage crisis which began when the U.S. Embassy was seized Nov. 4.

In Washington, reporters were told President Carter is willing to consider publicly expressing concern about past events in Iran in an effort to end the hostage crisis there.

The U.S. president, described as apparently dejected by what the administration sees as continuing confusion in Tehran, hopes the American hostages can be freed by May. But he is unwilling to state whether this can be achieved.

His thoughts about a so-called expression of concern were not given in detail, although he feels there are obvious things that can be said about the situation that has developed over the years in Iran.

Carter's views were made known during a meeting Saturday morning in the White House family dining room, under ground rules that prohibited identification of the source and direct quotation.

And in Monroe, La., 47 jailed Iranians, on the fourth day of a hunger strike, say they were arrested in retaliation for the seizure of the about 50 U.S. hostages in Iran and will not co-operate at their arraignment today, their lawyer says.

"Apparently the officers were trying to get the magic number of 50," lawyer Marion Overton White said Sunday. "The arrest is political and racial.

"They were singled out as Iranians and arrested.

There will be an increase in B.C. Hydro's electric rates effective April 1

B.C. Hydro electric rates are being increased effective April 1 to cover projected increases in the cost of providing service during the 1980-81 fiscal year.

While the increases average 7 per cent for residential and general customers the rate changes will have greater effect on those customers whose consumption of electricity is relatively high.

Residential customers who use 550 kilowatt-hours of electricity or less per two-month billing period will pay 25 cents more per month, or $3.00 a year.

RESIDENTIAL ELECTRIC RATE (Two-Month Period)

	OLD RATE	NEW RATE
BASIC CHARGE	$4.50	$5.00
1ST 550 kW.h PER kW.h	4.5¢	4.5¢
ALL ADDITIONAL CONSUMPTION PER kW.h	2.65¢	3.0¢
MINIMUM CHARGE	$4.50	$5.00

The above rate is for residential customers connected to Hydro's integrated transmission network.

Here are some examples of how new rates will affect typical electric bills:

- Apartment suite without either electric space heating or water heating—two month consumption of 500 kilowatt-hours: 25¢ a month increase.
- House with electric water heating but without electric space heating—two month consumption of 2,000 kW.h: $2.79 a month increase.
- House with both electric space heating and water heating—two month consumption of 5,000 kW.h: $8.04 a month increase.

Large industrial customers served on Hydro's electric transmission rate will receive rate increases of 22% on April 1, 1980, as announced in 1978.

(New electric rates effective April 1 for all residential and general customers will be enclosed with the first billing after that date.)

In case you're wondering

As a newcomer to the Saanich Peninsula I would like to learn about the railway lines which used to cover this area. I am told there used to be three which could be heard from Royal Oak.

The original train to the north end of the Saanich Peninsula was the Victoria and Sidney line, the history of which is outlined in George Hearn and David Wilkie's book The Cordwood Ltd.

Ignoring a better route to the west and a still better route to the east, it went through the middle of Saanich and centres of commerce at Keating, Saanichton and Royal Oak.

The first V and S station was on the north side of Hillside Avenue, about halfway between Douglas and what was then Rose Street.

A downtown depot was later built on Fisgard Street at the rear of the old Market building. This terminus might have been handy for farmers bringing their produce to town but it wasn't good railroading. Trains had to start on an upgrade and there was a sharp turn at Blanshard and Fisgard.

A new $17,000 ticket office and waiting room was built in 1910 on Blanshard at the site of the present Bay parking lot.

The tracks ran along Blanshard to Queens, down Rose and Bay, then up Rose to Market where another turn took them past a freight yard and turntable to the main line. A list of stations included Victoria, Hillside Avenue, Royal Oak, Beaver Lake, Elk Lake, Keating, Saanichton and Sidney.

The last run of the V and S was April 30, 1919.

The B.C. Electric Saanich Interurban began operating June 18, 1913, and was built for more than $500,000. It closed Oct. 31, 1924.

Trains left the depot at 1505-1517 Douglas (between Pandora and Cormorant), going along Cormorant to Douglas to Fisgard toward Pembroke. After crossing Queens, the trains made their first stop at Harriet Road. The next station was Tillicum.

At this point the line left the public roads and entered its own right-of-way, now named Interurban Road. The next stops were Marigold Road and Wilkinson Road, followed by Glynn, Eberts, Westwoodvale, Goward, Picken, Prospect Lake, Heals, Durrance Road and Brentwood. It then went along what is now Wallace Drive with stations at Bazan Bay, Tripp, Sidneyway, Meadlands, Patricia Junction, Mallowmot, Tatlow amd, finally, Deep Bay.

The third line to operate on the peninsula was the Canadian National Railway, originally called the Canadian North Pacific. The first trains began running in April, 1917.

The main station was on Alpha Street near Burnside and there were others at the junction near the present Town and Country shopping centre, North Quadra, Cordova, Sayward, Martindale, Michell, Saanich, Bazan, East Road, Range Road and Patricia Bay.

Victoria economy blooms early

The Victoria economy was so strong in February that it might as well be spring.

"It didn't seem like a winter month at all in terms of economic performance," local Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering said today.

The number of new jobs increased and the number of unemployed fell.

By summer standards it was only fair but as a winter month it was excellent, he said.

There were 602 new jobs listed on the CEC board during the month, up from 583 the previous February.

The number of job-seekers totalled 9,747, down from 10,262 at the same time last year.

Restaurant receipts were up 15 per cent and retail sales increased between 10 and 12 per cent.

Hotel occupancy rates were well above last February's levels. One hotel reported getting close to sold-out status over two weekends during the month.

The shipyard continues to be a source of strength. There were 725 employed at Burrard Yarrows Corporation (Esquimalt) during the month, up from 450 last February.

There has been a moderate increase in construction activity in the residential sector while on the commercial-industrial front it continues at about the same pace as last year.

Some condominums and townhouses are being built but no apartments. There is no sign of improvement in the district's tight rental situation for the balance of the year.

Real estate sales continue to soar.

Consumer confidence continues to be high. Most large stores reported revenue increases of at least 10 per cent although some small shops reported sales were disappointing.

Property tax boost likely for transit

By PAT DUFOUR

The Capital Regional District probably will have to increase property taxes to pay the first year's $2.2 million deficit when it takes over regional transit from B.C. Hydro on April 1.

Board chairman Jim Campbell conceded today it is unlikely the provincial cabinet will agree to the regional board's decision to cover the deficit through a surcharge on electricity bills when it discusses the issue Tuesday.

Campbell said Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm made it clear to himself and Sidney mayor Norma Sealey, chairman of the regional district's transit committee, he is opposed.

Campbell also admitted it had been reported to him that electoral area directors will walk out of any meeting that votes to pay the transit deficit through an increase of three cents a gallon for gasoline and diesel fuel.

"It has been reported to me," he said. "I would be unable to do anything about it except acknowledge the rules would make it impossible (without a quorum)."

"I hope the government will change its position and allow a Hydro tax for the first year on the grounds that in order to have a reasonably unanimous position by the elected officials it is necessary."

hydro hike opposed

If the cabinet doesn't support the hydro increase, he said he has no idea what the board will do.

Campbell said the board proposal to cover the deficit by increased Hydro costs, split 50-50 between commercial and residential users, would mean an increase of $1 per month per household.

The dilemma, he said, is that if a gasoline tax is used it would bear more heavily on residents in outlying areas where public transit is less available.

On the other hand, Campbell said, residents in such areas as Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt would be hardest hit by increased property taxes.

He was missing something until he began giving

By BRENDA DALGLISH

David Durrance thinks he's found the secret to happiness and self-fulfilment.

"As soon as I started giving instead of taking, that feeling I'd always had, that something was missing from my life, went away," Durrance said.

Durrance has been doing a lot of giving in the last few years.

In 1973 the then 33-year-old former school teacher happened upon a group of primitive people in the northern mountain areas of the Philippines. He said they seemed to need his help far more than anyone else he'd ever known.

Durrance, whose experiences were reported last summer in the Times, is back in Victoria to raise more funds to keep his small organization in the Philippines going.

The people, whose most respected members just 10 years ago were head-hunters, are malnourished and uneducated.

As Durrance explains it, they are caught in a cycle of events they can't control, like their fathers and their fathers' fathers before them.

"Their life is pure drudgery; they do nothing from the time they are old enough to walk but work at trying to survive."

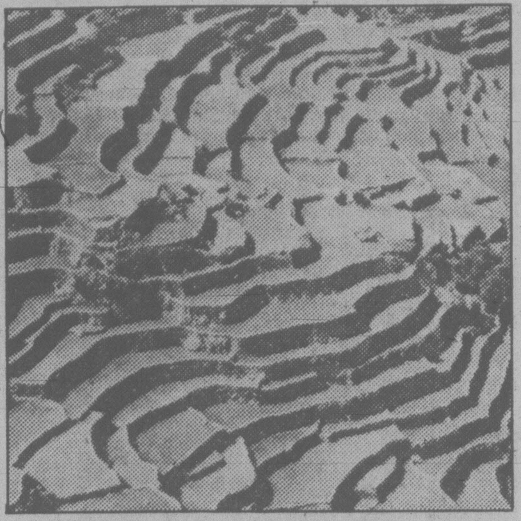
Durrance began by sponsoring individual children, providing enough money so they could get some extra education.

But now he needs money for more ambitious projects and is back in Victoria for a few months to raise raise it.

Durrance, whose family home is at 3721 Saanich Rd., is looking for people willing to volunteer their time and skills to go back to the Philippines with him to teach and work in the school and medical clinic he's established.

In fact his first volunteer from Victoria has already left. A nurse who read about his work is spending several months at the clinic.

He also needs money, he said, either direct sponsorship of a child's secondary or post-secondary education in one of the cities in the Philippines or general donations to be used for any of a number of projects he has planned.



Terraced rice fields in the Philippines

Durrance was home last fall and collected about $5,000 and donations of clothing, foodstuffs and medicines.

In fact, he laughs about his last trip back to the Philippines. He'd been given a large donation of vitamin pills by the Parke Davis pharmaceutical company and he dumped all of them into his suitcase.

He had no clothes, no books, just a large suitcase full of unidentified pills, he said. He expected to have difficulty getting through customs with his admittedly suspicious luggage but the bag was never opened.

Education is the only way to improve the people's lives, Durrance believes.

For now that means teaching just the very basics of agriculture, medicine and sanitation to the people.

Their diet is very restricted. They eat rice, which they grow on terraced land passed down through families for centuries, beans, a sweet potato-like vegetable called camote supplemented ocassionally by things like beetles and tadpoles.

One of Durrance's first efforts was to introduce a variety of fruits and vegetables, he hopes can be grown in the area. He's trying crops such as peanuts, soya beans (so far unsuccessfully), onions, cabbage, coconuts, oranges and watermelons.

Two of the children he's sponsored through school, one now a trained nurse, have returned to help him at the clinic he's established in Segada.

He has 43 people sponsoring children now but there are many more who would like to be able to continue their education, he said.

Their parents recognize the need for it, even though they can't afford to let their children continue past the government's free classes that end at about the Grade 6 level, said Durrance.

With the money he's received he chooses some of the most intelligent children and sends them on to boarding school and post-secondary education. He says he hopes that they'll return to their families and villages when they're finished and share their knowledge.

The cost of sponsoring a child is $18 a month and he's arranged to have the children correspond with their sponsors.

He's established an organization called the International Association for the Transformation of Man, a registered Canadian charitable organization, through which all sponsorships and donations are funnelled.

Anyone wanting more information (Durrance is willing to talk and give a slide presentation about his experiences for schools and other organziations) or wishing to donate any kind of assistance should contact him at 382-7647.

UVic students seek freeze on tuition fees

More than 1,700 students have signed a petition seeking a freeze on University of Victoria tuition fees.

The document and a request for the provincial government to pick up higher UVic operating costs was to be delivered to the university president's office this afternoon.

Alma Mater Society vice-president Terry Johnson said a student rally at noon was to give final endorsation of the move before a delegation goes to Dr. Howard Petch's office.

The protest is aimed at UVic board of governors, who await a study on student fees which may contain a recommendation to change means of assessment.

Students object to both an increase in the amount of fees now levied, and to a proposal adopted by University of B.C. by which tuition is tied to the operating costs of the university.

A grunt or a laugh?

If you come across someone nursing a bruised posterior — or laughing uproariously — he might have something to do with a couple of bizarre thefts in the city on Sunday.

A goat named Grunt was stolen from the backyard of a house at 578 John, and owner Dave Simm says his long-haired alpine friend is anything but friendly.

Simm says he brought his year-old goat home Sunday night to give him a wash and shampoo. Grunt normally resides on a farm in Sooke and isn't that used to people.

He put Grunt in the backyard and shortly before midnight noticed the gate was open.

Grunt may be smart, but not that smart; he had to have help.

The animal is about two feet tall with long ears, long curly hair and — this is the part that hurts — powerful black horns.

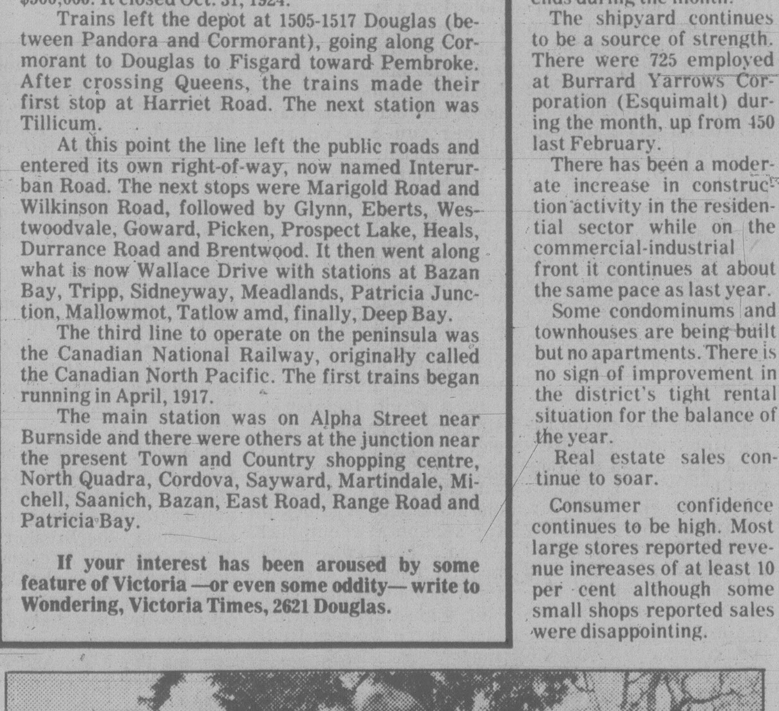
In the other theft six tanks of nitrous oxide or laughing gas were stolen from a storage room at Victoria General Hospital.

Police said the thieves could be in for an unpleasant surprise if they try to remove the gas without a regulator. The gas is under 2,200 pounds pressure. And that is no laughing matter.

The theft of the laughing gas was noticed by VGH employees shortly before noon Sunday.

Thieves broke a small hole in a back door of a storage room off Humboldt.

Four of the tanks were relatively small — measuring two feet by four feet — and could be hand-carried, but the other two were twice the size and normally require two men and a dolly to move.



TEETERING TO A TITLE: Determined to trap local teeter-tottering title, these four girls seesawed more than half a day, spurred on by parents and friends Saturday at Ambassador Park. Well-padded posteriors and a ready supply of snacks helped sustain the girls, who gave themselves five-mimute breaks every two hours. But 12-year-old Mindy Dick (forefront) grew weary after 14 hours of vertical reciprocation and her place was taken by a substitute. Corinna Nieman, Sonja Veerkamp and Pam Vagels, all 11, claim the city teetering title with 16½ hours. (John McKay photo)

Take heart on those draw tickets

By PAUL MINVIELLE

So you won five free tickets in a Western Express lottery draw when your ticket matched the last three digits of a winning number.

While you weren't quite as delighted as if you'd won the hundred thousand, you figured it was better than nothing, right?

Chances are if you hit the wrong retailer, however, he said: "Sorry. We're short of tickets. You'll have to mail your ticket to Winnipeg."

Notice, he said "short," not "out."

So you protested and you stamped your feet and still the man said no, waving a B.C. Lotteries bulletin under your nose.

Take heart. B.C. Lotteries Branch director Jim Taylor says he's going to set it all straight.

The bulletin states that increasing public demand for Western Express tickets has created a shortage, with no relief in sight for seven to eight weeks.

The bulletin notes that the situation has been "compounded" by the five free tickets being issued to holders of tickets on which the last three digits correspond to one of the winning numbers.

"Therefore," reads the bulletin, "it is strongly suggested that distributors make a determined effort to contact all retailers and instruct them to advise the general public to mail their last three digit winning tickets directly to the Western Canada Lottery Foundation."

The Times asked Taylor what justification there could be for making winners wait for their five free tickets when the instructions on the reverse of the tickets says freebies can be picked up at any participating retailer.

Taylor said the bulletin only went out because of the ticket shortage, and it was never intended to prevent retailers from doling out the free tickets if they had tickets.

Then why can't a winner pick up his five free tickets if they're sitting right there on the counter?

"He can," Taylor replied. "There's no question whatsoever about that."

When told many retailers were using his branch's bulletin as justification for not giving out the tickets, Taylor said: "I'll have a bulletin out today turning that around."

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market continued to crumble today, sliding below the 2000 level for the first time since Jan. 14 in active mid-afternoon trading.

Trading in shares of Gulfstream Resources Canada Ltd., which was halted this morning, resumed down 1 to $7½.

The company said production tests on four gas-bearing horizons of an exploratory well offshore Qatar resulted in a cumulative daily production rate of 53.8 million cubic feet of gas and 1,654 barrels of condensate.

Gulfstream has 10-percent interest in the well.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A plummeted 17 to $116, Gulf Canada 11¾ to $161¼, Cominco 5½ to $65½, Dome Petroleum 5 to $67 and Bow Valley Industries 4½ to $47¾.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 10:52 a.m. PST was 5,520,402 shares.

Of issues traded, 115 advanced, 292 declined and 134 remained unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp led the industrials, remaining steady at $7.45 on 136,170 shares and Keg Restaurants gained a nickel to $1.80 on 5,700. Canadian Javelin Ltd. dropped .05 to $1.55 on 3,250 and Ardiem Industrial Corp. rose .04 to .31 on 3,000. Renn Industries advanced .05 to $1.85 and Taro Industries remained steady at $5.00.

On the resource and development board, Charriot Resources Warrants gained .07 to $1.07 on 55,000 shares and Andex Mines Ltd. advanced .02 to $1.17 on 53,800. Musto Explorations remained steady at $2.30 on 44,600 and Mountaineer Mines dropped a nickel to .70 on 38,700. Quinstar Oil Corp. declined .15 to $2.60 and Silver Standard dropped .08 to $1.97.

Samson Energy Corp. led traders on the curb exchange, gaining a nickel to $1.00 on 284,450 shares and Denver Silver Inc. remained steady at $2.05 on 200,000. Goldstack Resources remained unchanged at $1.05 on 143,500 and Oriana Development dropped .04 to .42 on 76,000. Beach Gold Mines rose .08 to $1.05 and Regal Petroleum remained unchanged at $1.10.

New York

Oil and precious-metals issues were the biggest losers as the stock market continued to slump today.

In the oil group, Mobil was down 1½ to $75⅝; Exxon lost 1 to $59⅞; Texaco dropped 1⅛ to $35⅞, and Standard Oil of Indiana gave up 2⅛ to $99⅜.

Gold stocks showing large losses included Homestake Mining down 4⅝ to $51⅜, Dome Mines 6⅛ to $63⅛ and ASA 2⅝ to $43¾.

Asarco tumbled 5½ to $43¾ and Hecla Mining 5¾ to $38½ among the copper and silver issues.

The decline in the metals stocks was accompanied by a slide in gold, silver and copper prices in commodity markets. Gold fell to about the $580-a-ounce level.

The decline was blamed on a growing belief among traders that a substantial economic slowdown was approaching.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of moderate trading today.
